

RUSSIA URGES EUROPEAN GROUP FOR PEACE USE OF ATOM ENERGY

Says U. S., Moscow Could Participate — Plan Proposed as Substitute for Euratom Which Reds Oppose.

MOSCOW, July 13 (AP)—The Kremlin today called for the establishment of a European organization—in which both the Soviet Union and the United States would take part—to control peaceful use of atomic energy.

A circular distributed to the American, British, French and other embassies proposed the organization as a substitute for Euratom, the six-nation agency which the nations of the Schuman coal-steel pool now are in the process of organizing. The six are France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

The Soviet statement charged Euratom would be a tool of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. It asserted that West German participation in Euratom would deepen the division of Germany and in effect give the Germans the chance to manufacture atomic weapons.

Regional Organization. The Soviet circular noted: "The Soviet government considers the moment opportune to convene a conference of European countries to examine the problem of creating a regional organization for peaceful use of atomic energy."

"This organization could be created on an intergovernmental basis with the participation of all European states which express a desire to do so. The United States could also participate in this organization."

The Soviet circular added: "In expressing its conviction that interested governments will willingly give their attention to this appeal from the U.S.S.R., the Soviet government also expresses the conviction that such co-operation of all European countries would contribute greatly to the progress of science and technique, for the good of humanity."

First Pool Plan. The first suggestion for the pooling of atomic energy resources for peaceful ends was made by President Eisenhower in a speech to the United Nations General Assembly in New York Dec. 8, 1953. At that time, he urged the major powers to co-operate in this development and proposed donations of nuclear materials to an international pool.

Russia has agreed with the United States and other countries to set up under U.N. auspices an international agency for peaceful atomic development. An 84-nation conference will meet in New York in September to consider a charter.

In addition, Communist countries announced last March their own atomic organization—the United Institute of Nuclear Research. The Soviet Union promised nuclear research equipment to a center to be set up in Russia.

The circular note suggested that the conference take up "a study of the economic aspects of the peaceful use of atomic energy, a study of the possibilities of co-ordination of the utilization of basic material resources, technical assistance, the exchange of information, the right of technical and scientific consultation by all countries with states which are highly developed in the atomic field, assistance in the field of personnel in connection with the production of atomic energy and the maintenance of permanent contact with national and international organizations already existing in Europe in the field of the use of atomic energy for peaceful purposes."

World Co-operation. "This conference would also examine other questions related to the expansion of international co-operation on this plan."

The circular said European co-operation would not exclude bilateral agreements which could contribute to general co-operation on the condition that they be concluded on a basis of equality without any political, economic or military considerations incompatible with the sovereignty and independence of states.

In its criticism of Euratom, the Soviet circular said "this system would give an advantage to those countries which are most powerful economically, to the detriment of those which are not able to organize the production of atomic energy. It would increase lack of confidence and create additional difficulties for the organization of European security."

"The creation of an organization including only one part of Germany, would accentuate the division of Germany, and complicate the creation of a peaceful and democratic state. In addition Euratom would abolish all restrictions concerning the production of atomic weapons in Western Germany. This would permit revanchist (revenge-seeking) circles in Western Germany to organize the production of atomic weapons. Thus creating a serious menace for peace in Europe."

U.S. to Continue Nuclear Tests Until Arms Cut Plan Shapes Up

By ALVIN H. GOLDSTEIN, A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., July 13—The United States will continue testing nuclear weapons for "the protection of the free world" until a disarmament program is devised which assures elimination of atomic and hydrogen arms, James J. Wadsworth told the United Nations Disarmament Commission today.

"It has been established by expert scientific research that properly conducted atomic experiments are not a hazard to health and safety," Wadsworth said, in remarks directed at the request formally presented yesterday by India for immediate suspension of large-scale experimental nuclear explosions. "The only answer to the serious problem is to place international safeguards on the use of the weapon itself," Wadsworth continued. "A competition of large-scale experimental nuclear explosions. Both sides are well aware of the danger."

"In the absence of an effective disarmament agreement, the United States is obliged to own safety and for the protection of our friends in the world."

Integral Part of Program. Wadsworth said the United States considered the atomic experiments directly related to negotiations for an arms reduction program and international control of nuclear weapons. They were, in fact, "an integral part" of that program, he said.

Admittedly, no nation had the right to jeopardize the health and safety of others, and the United States conducted experiments in regard to others, he said. He cited the results of scientific research to support the United States view that properly conducted experiments were not dangerous.

Anthony Nutting of Britain supported Wadsworth, adding that it was necessary to link a bar on atomic weapon production with a prohibition of nuclear tests. "As much as my government regrets such delay, it is evident the world will live in fear until there is an end to the manufacture of nuclear and thermonuclear bombs," Nutting said.

Britain proposed, however, reaching a "partial disarmament" agreement which would include measures to regulate and limit vast nuclear experimental explosions.

Russia Supports India. Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko recalled that his government previously had advocated an agreement to end the tests. In view of this he said, Russia's attitude toward Menon's proposal was "positive," he added.

"If the West continues to obstruct agreement, then it is obvious that the tests will continue—including tests in the Soviet Union."

India's proposal for the suspension of the nuclear tests as a step toward an atomic control program was detailed yesterday by V. K. Krishna Menon, who appeared as Indian representative of the commission. Menon's speech immediately encountered mild objections from Jules Moch of France. For practical measures to be included in any disarmament plan, Moch declared for three phases: (1) Establishing a committee of experts charged with recommending a limitation on the number, nature and power of test explosions. (2) Placing a bar on national explosions for military purposes, a prohibition to be closely coupled with a like restriction on military nuclear production, each prohibition to become effective at or about the same time. (3) Retaining authorization of test explosions for peaceful purposes, "these explosions to be effected under the supervision of an international control organ charged with verifying the innocuous nature of the explosion and its peaceful intent."

Moch agreed with Menon as to the risks involved in the harmful after-effects of nuclear weapons tests; but, on the basis of scientific reports, he did not feel that these risks were immediate or that they should be taken tragically. He felt also that, if there were no increase in the "rhythm" of test explosions, such harmful after-effects could be minimized.

SENATE VOTES FOR U.S. TO BUILD ATOM REACTORS

$400,000,000 Nuclear Energy Program Approved 49-40 Over G.O.P. Opposition.

WASHINGTON, July 13 (AP)—The Senate overrode Administration objections yesterday and passed a bill authorizing a $400,000,000 program of Government construction of atomic power reactors.

The vote was 49 to 40. The measure now goes to the House. Backers said the measure was essential to get the nation's atomic power industry launched and to win the race with Russia for world leadership in development of the new energy resource.

Forty-six Democrats voted for passage and were joined by three Republicans, Senators Thomas H. Kuchel of California, William Langer of North Dakota, and Alexander Wiley of Wisconsin. All 40 votes against passage were cast by Republicans.

The Republican opponents insisted that the legislation was not needed and that it might actually retard efforts of private industry in the field by scaring off private capital.

Reactors at AEC Plan. The bill directs the Atomic Energy Commission to build large-scale prototype reactors (atomic furnaces) at AEC plants to develop electricity for the big Government installations. The exact sites are not designated.

It also calls for construction of smaller experimental reactors in this country and directs AEC to conduct a "vigorous program" of co-operation and assistance abroad in design, construction and operation of reactors.

Senator Clinton P. Anderson (Dem.), New Mexico, chairman of the Senate House Atomic Energy Committee, said the bill envisioned three large-scale prototype reactors to develop 100,000 kilowatts of electricity or more, plus two smaller reactors.

Chairman Lewis L. Strauss of the AEC told the joint committee in hearings on the bill that his agency already was conducting a strong program in the field and no further authority was needed.

Changes in Bill. Senator Albert Gore (Dem.), Tennessee, originally introduced the bill in a somewhat different form. His first version called for six large reactors to be built in different regions of the country.

This was modified in the joint committee to eliminate any reference to the number of reactors and to provide that the electricity generated should be used by AEC plants. Gore explained this was to avoid a public-private power fight which might have killed the bill.

The United States is blessed with a comparative abundance of fossil fuel—oil, coal and gas—but this means that it is more important than ever for the Government to push development of atomic power, Gore argued.

That is the case, he said, because private enterprise has little incentive to go into the field since atomic power is as yet far from economically competitive with the regular fuels. Gore said one of the most important facts to remember is

Power Official Under Scrutiny As State Department Adviser

Joint Committee Wants to Know if There Is Conflict of Interest in Walker Cislis's Dual Role.

By GEORGE H. HALL, A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 13 — The activities of Walker Cislis, president of the Detroit Edison Co. and a leading figure in the private electric utility field, recently have come under congressional scrutiny, it was learned today.

Several members of the joint committee on Atomic Energy have been quietly gathering material on Cislis's dual role as president of the Detroit Edison Co. and as a consultant to the International Co-operation Administration of the State Department.

ICA says there is no conflict because Cislis is head of an operating company that manufactures nothing for sale abroad. He is regarded as an expert on power distribution. ICA is arranging to help finance atomic research reactors overseas.

Yesterday the Senate passed, 49 to 40, the Gore bill which would, among other things, centralize in the Atomic Energy Commission the responsibility for United States atomic assistance programs in which ICA now has a hand.

The question of the possible conflict of interest, which might be somewhat similar to the case of Adolph Wenzel, a consultant to the budget bureau at the time he was a New York banker in the Dixon-Yates case, was brought up at recent closed hearings of the joint committee.

This colloquy took place: CHAIRMAN CLINTON P. ANDERSON (Dem.), New Mexico, to Lewis L. Strauss, chairman of the AEC: Do you think Mr. Chairman, there is any possibility of what is called a conflict of interest by having Mr. Cislis, who is in the power business in the United States and is vitally interested in whether or not that power develops abroad, be the official power consultant to ICA?

ANDERSON: Yes. He has all of these groups, equipment manufacturers in the United States and they are getting in there and ready to do that job. Why has not the Atomic Energy Committee been kept currently informed of that?

ANDERSON: Yes. We have no responsibility for it whatever, and I assume that you think that other parts of the world probably will find it feasible to use nuclear power earlier than the United States.

Western Europe alone is estimated to offer a 12 billion dollar market for reactors and nuclear materials in the years ahead, he said.

Gore said that, on the basis of present plans, Russia will have 4 to 6 lead over the United States by 1960 in atomic power development.

U.S. RED PARTY DENIES IT IS RUN FROM MOSCOW

Cites Its Criticism of Russian Leaders, Seeks Reopening of SACB Case.

WASHINGTON, July 13 (AP)—The United States Communist party contended today that its recent criticism of Russian leaders proves it is no slave of Moscow.

Through attorneys John Abt and Joseph Forer, the party asked the Subversive Activities Control Board for a full-scale reopening of a long drawn out proceeding aimed at requiring the party to register as Moscow-controlled.

Registration would mean that the party would have to disclose its financing and membership lists. Since the downgrading of Stalin began in February, Abt and Forer said, the United States and other Communist parties outside Russia have "repudiated past policies and actions which flowed from their uncritical acceptance of certain views and acts of the government of the Soviet Union and its leaders."

In a number of instances, they said, there has been a change of current policies of Russia.

By the United Press. (Attorneys for the party said there has been no international Communist organization since April. They said American Communists are an independent group seeking the peaceful promotion of Socialism.

Department of Justice attorneys Joseph Alderman and James T. Devine contended the party still takes its orders from Russia.

The board ruled in 1953 that the party was Soviet-dominated and should register as such with the Justice Department under the Internal Security Act.

Recently the Supreme Court threw the case back to the board for reconsideration. The court said the testimony of three government witnesses before the SACB might have been "tainted."

The government attorneys insisted that court's decision dealt only with the limited issue of the three witnesses—Manning Johnson, Harvey Matusow and the late Paul Crouch. All three were former Communists who testified against the party.

CITY CONSIDERING LIBERALIZATION OF CIVIL SERVICE, PAY MAXIMUMS

Mayor Presents Ideas of Bureau Heads to Freeholders' Group—
Pensions, Residency
Rule Discussed.

Liberalization of the regulations governing employment and promotion of city workers, as suggested by municipal department heads, was under consideration today by the civil service committee of the charter board of freeholders.

John F. X. Callanan, chairman of the committee, had invited the city's administrative officials to comment on "strengths and weaknesses" of the merit system. Their suggestions were summarized by Mayor Raymond A. Tucker in a memorandum read before the committee yesterday.

It was generally agreed that the present $10,000-a-year salary limitation makes it difficult for the city to keep qualified workers for key jobs, the Mayor reported. Some department heads urged that the requirement of one year's residence in the city be dropped in filling jobs requiring technical skill.

Establishment of a pension plan for municipal employees also was advocated. The city is now authorized to set up a retirement system when permitted by state law. Enabling legislation would be required.

Would Modify Rule. William A. Webb, a member of the freeholder committee, suggested that the city's merit system might be improved by modifying the "rule of three" now used in making job appointments, but most heads of municipal departments took an opposite view.

Under this rule, the name of three candidates who have qualified for a position by examination are submitted to a department head, who selects one of the candidates and returns the names of the other two to the civil service list.

"I have seen a man stay on that list and be rejected time after time without being given a chance to prove his merit," said Webb. "In one case, a candidate was passed over repeatedly because of his politics, although he was at the top of the qualification list."

It might be advised to adopt a "rule of one" and consider only the candidate at the head of the list, Webb declared, adding that a six-month probationary period gives the department head an opportunity to test a worker and recommend rejection if the candidate proves unsatisfactory.

Favor Keeping Rule. Most of the department heads, however, favored retention of the three-man rule, and some even thought it should be expanded to permit a choice among five candidates.

Administrative officials would like to have more authority for promotion within their departments. A worker who is a department veteran and has proved capable should be given consideration over some one from another department who makes a higher grade in an examination, it was suggested.

"Many directors contend that the department of personnel is doing an inadequate job of recruiting employees, with the various departments forced to recruit their own key personnel," the Mayor reported.

There were complaints that examinations are "too theoretical," it takes too long to get rid of an unsatisfactory worker, job classifications are "too inflexible," and exceptional workers have been lost because of inability to reward employees who have reached their maximum pay scale.

In a television talk last night, the Mayor expressed concern over the light attendance at freeholder meetings and appealed for wider public interest.

Church Damaged by Vandals

CHURCH BUILDING SUFFERS DAMAGE FROM VANDALISM

The Rev. Bill Beeny, pastor of New Testament Baptist Church, discovered extensive vandalism today in the church's new home, 4318 Norfolk avenue, vacant since Tower Grove Baptist Church moved out Jan. 29.

Windows were smashed, papers strewn over floors and a door torn from its hinges. Neighbors reported sounds of breaking glass at various times since Jan. 29. Several weeks ago three juveniles were sent to Missouri Hills, the city's correctional institution for boys, as a result of one report of vandalism.

Final papers in the sale of the building, for a total of $70,000, are to be signed this week, it was reported by the Rev. Don Kiser, assistant pastor of New Testament Baptist. First services are scheduled for July 22.

The structure consists of three floors and a basement. Seating capacity of the auditorium is 1500. New home of Tower Grove Baptist is at 4257 Magnolia avenue. The Testament Baptist has been holding services in the old Congress Theater, 4023 Olive street.

'SPIDER' BURKS FIRED BY KXLW AS DISC JOCKEY

Jesse D. (Spider) Burks, a disc jockey for Radio Station KXLW for nine years, has been dismissed from his $20,000-a-year job, he said today.

Burks, 4334 Washington boulevard, said he was called into the office of William W. Jeffery, general manager and vice president, after his last show Wednesday and handed a check for services through Wednesday and two weeks vacation. He said he was not given prior notice of the dismissal, and his contract does not expire until October.

Jeffery's only comment was: "We obviously have our reasons and would not like to go into them." Burks said he was told he was dismissed because of insubordination.

Burks, a Negro, told the Post-Dispatch he objected to requests by the station that he play only music "of a low level." A graduate of St. Louis public schools and Hampton (Va.) Institute, he is married and has a 10-year-old son.

HOME NEXT DOOR SOAKED IN FILLING NEW SWIM POOL

A broken fire hose which sent water cascading into the home of Leger Grindon instead of filling the new swimming pool of his neighbor, University City Councilman-at-large Harold C. Ackert, did not permanently dampen the friendship of the two men, they agreed today.

A contractor who built Ackert's pool behind his house at 7460 Amherst avenue, University City, borrowed a hose from the University City fire department when the job was finished July 3 to give the pool a quick test filling.

The hose ran from a hydrant across the Grindon lawn at 7456 Amherst; and when it broke, a fountain of water poured through open windows on both the first and second floors. Damage was estimated by Grindon at from $1000 to $2000. Another hose used to fill Ackert's pool was routed differently—at the Grindons' request.

2-YEAR-OLD CHILD WANDERS OFF, IS FOUND MILE AWAY

A 2-year-old child, Virginia Jett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Jett, 12489 Spanish Pond road, wandered away from her home in north St. Louis county about 10 a.m. yesterday and was missing nearly four hours before she turned up at the home of a neighbor more than a mile away.

St. Louis county police and others helped search for the missing child, who apparently wandered into the underbrush near the yard of her home and kept walking. She wandered into the yard of Edward Vogel-sang, 13048 Spanish Pond road, who called police.

Virginia was taken home to her mother none the worse for the experience, except for a mosquito bite or two. Mrs. Jett gave her lunch and put her down for a nap. Virginia fussed a little, as if she still wanted to go walking, the relieved mother reported.

VISITOR BEATEN BY TWO YOUTHS AT PLAYGROUND

Illinois Man Knocked Down, Struck With Ball Bat in Lafayette Park Attack.

Robert E. Tension of Bloomington, Ill., was struck in the face and knocked down by one youth and then was struck with a baseball bat wielded by another youth last night at Lafayette Park playground, where the Tensions were with their two small children, police reported. The blow with the bat fractured Tension's right ankle.

Mrs. Tension, seated 60 feet away, failed to see the attack because it happened so quickly, she said. Others present witnessed it and provided police with the assailants' descriptions. Among witnesses was Ronald Roemer, playground supervisor, 5424 Gresham avenue.

Two young men approached Tension as his children, Terry, 6 years old, and Susan, 9, were using the swings at the playground, police were told. The youths' ages were estimated at 18 or 19 and their weights at 150 to 160 pounds. Tension is 31.

"Why don't you let little children ride the swing?" one of the teen-agers demanded.

"Mine are small," Tension said. Swinging his fist, the youth who had opened the conversation yelled to the other, "This is right down our alley!"

After Tension fell and was struck with the bat, his assailants ran west through the park toward Missouri avenue. Tension was taken to City Hospital, where his condition today was listed as serious.

Roemer said the swings are designed for use by children ranging in age from about 7 to the early teens. Just before the attack, he said, one was vacant. The Tension family had come to St. Louis on a vacation visit to Mrs. Tension's mother, Mrs. John Lanigan, 19274 Park avenue.

An automobile brushed against the clothing of Paul Ferguson, yesterday on McLarn road, Jennings, as its five young occupants leaned out the windows, shouted and slapped the sides of the car, Ferguson told Magistrate Norman Anderson of Jennings.

Police arrested Fred M. Fasn, 19 years old, 9700 block of Halls Ferry road, Jennings, whose license number Ferguson gave to Jennings constables.

Fasn, who was charged in a warrant with careless and reckless driving and released on $1000 bond, said Ferguson had been walking in the middle of the road.

Ferguson, of 4905A Geraldine avenue, reported he was walking along the side of the road, which is wide and has no sidewalks. He said Fasn's vehicle swerved abruptly toward him at a time when there was no traffic on the other side of the road.

In front of the meters will be permitted daily except between 7 and 9 a.m. and 4 and 6 p.m. The Parking Meter Commission ordered them installed.

Opposition has been expressed by Director of Streets Frank Kriz, Maj. William Ciulka, head of the Police Department's traffic division, and Traffic Commissioner Charles G. Gontier. All were absent from a meeting at which installation of the meters was approved.

Twelfth boulevard is 10 lanes wide between Clark and Washington avenue and eight lanes wide between Washington and Franklin avenue. Chestnut is eight lanes wide between Eleventh and Fifteenth. Travers said he believes parking in front of the meters will not interfere with traffic in off-peak hours.

Inquiry Into Tax Settlement For Client of Andrews' Firm

Revenue Chief Ordered Case Handled by His Former Company Not Mentioned to Him 'Under Any Circumstances.'

By a Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 13—The House Ways and Means Committee is seeking to determine how the American Distilling Co. of Peoria, Ill., got a federal income tax claim of $12,872,586 settled for $1,249,000.

The distillery was a client of T. Coleman Andrews & Co., accounting firm of Richmond, Va. The settlement was worked out in 1954 after T. Coleman Andrews severed his connection with the Virginia firm to become Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

After the House committee spent more than an hour yesterday studying a staff investigator's report on the case, Representative Noah Mason (Rep., Illinois), told reporters that, "judging from what has been developed so far, there is no scandal or any irregularity."

Another member of the committee, Representative Aime J. Forand (Dem.), Rhode Island, said that not all questions have been answered yet.

As disclosed by the Post-Dispatch, the huge tax claim was quietly settled by stipulation in Washington after it had been pending more than nine years.

Andrews' accounting firm had been listed as auditors for the distillery for 12 years prior to the settlement. Andrews, who resigned from the internal revenue post last October to become board chairman of American Fidelity & Casualty Co. of Richmond, asserted that he had "nothing whatsoever" to do with the settlement.

He said he had instructed subordinates in the Bureau of Internal Revenue "not to mention the case to me under any circumstances," and to take up policy questions in the matter with the general counsel of the Treasury Department.

The claim grew out of distribution of 237,500 barrels of whisky to a trustee and hence to stockholders. The distribution was made in 1943, when liquor was in short supply.

In disposing of the claim, the distiller at the same time arranged to settle another tax claim of $800,000 for $377,997.

In the companion case, the Government contended that the whisky trust owed taxes for its part in distribution of the liquor.

Over the country, however, department store sales were 3 per cent higher last week than in the corresponding period last year.

CHILD'S BIG TOE SEVERED

Kathleen Stecher, 4 years old, suffered the loss of the big toe of her right foot yesterday when it was severed by the spokes of the rear wheel of a bicycle on which she was riding in front of her home, 2052 Ann avenue.

The child, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Stecher, was sitting behind her brother, Eugene Jr., 16, who was pedaling the bicycle. Her foot slipped against the wheel when she tried to jump to the ground.

TRUMAN ENTERS STATE POLITICS, INDORSSES BLAIR

Jefferson City, Mo., July 13 (UP)—Former President Harry S. Truman entered Missouri Democratic primary politics today with an unqualified endorsement of Lt. Gov. James T. Blair Jr. for Governor.

"I am for Jim Blair for Governor and want to see him elected," Truman informed Blair's campaign managers here by telephone.

The endorsement was the first open indication that Mr. Truman would take any part in the Democratic primary. But he left no doubt that his full support was behind Blair.

"I have always been for him," Truman said. The ex-President explained that when he returned from his recent European trip he found "an invitation" to join other Jackson county Democrats in support of Blair. He said the invitation arrived while he was away and that he could not respond to it before.

Jack Stapleton, Blair's publicity man, released the endorsement following the telephone conversation.

"This news is too good to keep," Stapleton said. Blair, conceded to be the front runner in the three-way race for the Democratic nomination, was not available for immediate comment.

Other candidates are Charles A. Lee of Webster Groves and Roy Glidewell of Salem.

OPERATOR OF BARBER SHOP
ARRESTED ON GAMING COUNT

William L. Staley, owner and operator of a barber shop in the 500 block of Pine street, was arrested by gambling squad officers today and booked suspected of setting up and keeping a common gambling house.

Staley, 64 years old, was found to have betting paraphernalia in his possession and in his shop, police said. He told officers that for the last six months he had been accepting bets averaging a total of $150 a day and had been receiving a 5 per cent commission on them.

Staley denied holding the bets. He said they were picked up each day by a runner whose name and employer he asserted he did not know.

HODGE OFFICE WORKERS UNDER

ferred to other duties shortly before the alleged irregularities came to light.

The case has clouded Republican chances of winning Illinois, a key state, in the November election. Hodge, a Republican, is a candidate for re-election in the fall, although Republican Gov. William G. Stratton, also a candidate for re-election, has ordered him to withdraw.

County, state and federal inquiries into the operation of the auditor's office started after the Chicago Daily News reported that certain individuals listed as payees on state checks never received them although the checks had been cashed.

43 Checks Under Inquiry. Contraband started an investigation of 43 state checks, totaling $536,226, several of which he said were cashed under "questionable" circumstances.

The Chicago Sun-Times revealed today that all the workers guarding canceled checks in the auditor's office were transferred to other departments shortly before the investigation started.

The paper learned also through Ackerman that one of the office workers may have several of the missing checks in her custody.

Mrs. Fannie Maple, who is in charge of microfilm of the checks, said she has in her office many checks which have been missing from the regular files when investigators looked for them. Mrs. Maple checks the file to make sure the microfilm are clear prints of the checks.

"If a print isn't readable," Mrs. Maple said, "I get the original warrant and keep it in my files."

Ackerman said he planned to go through Mrs. Maple's files today. "Maybe we'll find some of our missing warrants right there," he said.

Received 'Large Batch.' Mrs. Maple also told Ackerman that "somehow" she received a large "batch" of original checks about two and one-half months ago when the custodian of the warrants was transferred to a new job.

When questioned by reporters, the custodian, George Benckly, said he and his entire crew of seven were transferred to new jobs in a "surprise" move about two and one-half months ago. He said the transfer order was delivered by Epping and Lloyd Lane, another top Hodge aide.

Lane said he or Epping might have "spread the word" about the transfer but that any transfer order would have come from Hodge himself.

Asked the reason for the transfer, Lane said the auditor's office had discovered some checks missing about that time, two and one-half months ago.

Lane has been subpoenaed for a grand jury appearance July 16, along with Edward Hintz, president of the Southmoor Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago and a number of other persons.

Epping has been subpoenaed for July 23, along with Hodge. Hintz was directed to produce records of the bank's dealings with 36 persons and firms, including Hodge, Hodge's wife, their Florida apartment hotel, and many of the firms and persons to whom the questionable checks were made out. One of the firms listed is the Wood River Printing & Publishing Co. Plans to Demand Refund.

(The Associated Press said State Treasurer Warren E. Wright failed to obtain reimbursement of $260,000 from the Southmoor Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago today for state vouchers allegedly cashed under questionable circumstances.)

(Wright appeared in the bank and made several attempts to obtain the money. He was shunted from one official to another, and finally told that no one in the bank had authority to hand over the money. Wright left the bank after saying that he would institute suit against the bank immediately for recovery of the funds paid on 21 state checks totaling $259,384 cashed there.)

(Despite Wright's move, the bank's directors assured its depositors that the bank's assets have been legal, and its "financial standing could not be affected in any way" by the investigation of Hodge's office. The directors' statement called attention to insurance of individual accounts up to $10,000 by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and said that the bank has $1,250,000 coverage under separate insurance policies.)

Epping was learned to be the accountant for Cam Record Co. Inc., which holds a contract to microfilm the auditor's records. It also was disclosed that Epping "steered" the Cam firm to the Southmoor bank for a loan of about $5000.

Epping has been identified by the bank attorney as the person who cashed a number of the questionable checks involved in the inquiry at the Southmoor bank.

Hodge said that early next week he would put up an additional $50,000 bond, in compliance with an order from Stratton. If Hodge fails to put up the bond within the next 20 days, Stratton has threatened to remove him from office.

There has been speculation that Hodge might have difficulty in getting a bonding company to put up the surety since his office affairs are under both state and federal investigation.

Hodge, however, said yesterday he would have "no trouble" making the additional bond—the maximum required by law for the auditor.

Any surety Hodge is able to arrange must be approved by the Governor and two members of the state Supreme Court. If they fail to approve, it would be tantamount to removing Hodge from office—or at least placing him in a position where he would fail to meet the Governor's requirement.

(Despite the clamor and the threat of ouster, Hodge told the Associated Press yesterday he would fight to remain in office. He changed tack slightly after a previous statement that he would seek re-election in November, saying it was a matter he would further explore with his family.)

The Governor also warned Hodge that if he does not withdraw from the race, he will be opposed by a Republican-sponsored candidate.

Hodge Defends Epping. Hodge walked into his state-house office late yesterday and handed reporters a statement, which said Epping "will be vindicated" of irregularities in Hodge's office.

Hodge's statement said: "Certain charges have been made which charge Edward Epping, my administrative assistant, with alleged irregularities in the conduct of the affairs of my office."

"If there is any merit in the charges made against my office, and if some of my employees is at fault, I am sure that it is someone other than Edward Epping. When all the facts are ultimately known, Edward Epping will be vindicated."

By the Associated Press. Hodge, personable and well dressed, is a real estate and insurance man. He served three consecutive terms in the Illinois General Assembly as representative of the Forty-seventh District in southwestern Illinois.

He made and withdrew a bid for Governor in 1952 and had been mentioned as a possible head of the state G.O.P. ticket in 1950.

He owns the Hodge Agency, a Granite City realty, insurance and building firm. He also is co-owner of the Esquire Apartments Hotel in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., director of the Paramount Fire Insurance Co. of New York, and director of the Mercantile Mortgage Co. of Granite City. He owns two Illinois farms and has an interest in a Pecos (Tex.) produce ranch.

Says Hodge Had Stock in Bank His Office Reorganized. CHICAGO, July 13 (UP)—A bank director said today that State Auditor Orville E. Hodge became a stockholder in a suburban Chicago bank which had been reorganized by Hodge's office.

P. Warren Smith of Northfield issued a statement saying he had represented Hodge's interests and became a director in the Bank of Elmwood Park, holding bank stock in Hodge's behalf.

Smith said that in 1955 he held 11,355 shares of stock in the bank as nominee for the Hodge Agency Inc., a firm operated by the state auditor in Granite City. The holdings, estimated at about 40 per cent of the bank's total stock were sold a month ago.

Other Developments. There were three other Chicago developments:

1. Directors of the Southmoor Bank & Trust Co., where checks issued by Hodge's office were cashed, said they were "confident" there had been "no illegal acts" by its officers.

2. Herbert C. Buschen, Democratic candidate for governor, said Gov. William G. Stratton had been "lax" in not obtaining semi-annual financial reports from Hodge required by the Constitution.

3. Donald B. Hatmaker, 51-year-old Chicago lawyer, announced that he will file as an independent candidate for state auditor in the November election. Meanwhile, Republican party leaders kept up a search for an organization candidate to replace Hodge.

Succeeded Closed Bank. The Bank of Elmwood Park succeeded the First State Bank of Elmwood Park, which was one of three banks Hodge's office closed here April 11, 1953, on complaints about some of their banking practices.

The Bank of Elmwood Park opened May 28, 1953, under a reorganization. Former Gov. Dwight Green, now a Chicago lawyer, is chairman of the board in the new management.

Smith said Hodge came to him in January 1955 and asked that 3500 shares of bank stock owned by the Hodge Agency be transferred to Smith's name, and that Smith serve as a director of the bank.

Assured of Propriety. Smith said he was "assured there was nothing improper in the Hodge Agency, Inc., owning stock in the bank" and he accepted. He said he became a director shortly afterward.

Smith said he acquired 7665 more shares of stock at $27 a share for the Hodge agency last summer. He said the entire Hodge holdings were sold June 15, 1956, to two Chicago real estate firms.

TESTIMONY ENDS IN GAS STRIKE INJUNCTION SUIT

The company had demanded that riser connections—a T-joint from the gas meter to gas appliances in homes and industrial plants—be installed by outside contractors. The union insisted that Laclede employees do the job as they had in the past.

After the company's counter proposal was received, Morris J. Levin, attorney for the union, and an attorney conferred until last midnight on strike issues. Levin reported today: "We made some progress."

Appelbaum said the attorneys were conferring in accordance with the union's proposal of Wednesday that the riser connection issue be worked out by the lawyers while company and union negotiators continue their discussions of wages and other provisions of a new contract.

Gregory E. Brengle, a gas company employee for 23 years, who is in charge of the union's emergency crews, said approximately 150 emergency calls have been investigated by the union since the strike started July 1. Under cross examination he said all repairs could not be made by the emergency crews because of lack of proper equipment.

Says Company Ignored Leaks. William LaVelle, financial secretary and business agent for Local 8-6, to which operating and maintenance men belong, said that before the strike started there were approximately 2000 gas leaks reported throughout the area which the company did not repair. When company officials were asked about this, he added, they answered in effect, that it is cheaper to let them leak.

Gas leaks do damage to some trees and shrubs, he said, and some residents deliberately ignite gas leaking from pipes as a means of forcing the company to do something about the leaks.

Prior to the strike, he said, Elmer L. Ramsey, vice president of the company in charge of industrial relations, was told the unions would set up emergency crews to investigate leaks and stoppages during the strike.

He quoted Ramsey as saying "Okay." He was then asked if Ramsey warned the unions about touching company property. LaVelle replied: "No, he did not."

Levin placed in the court record revisions of National Labor Relations Board rules which state in effect that the board will assume jurisdiction over utilities whose gross yearly income is valued at $3,000,000 or more. He said this rule of the board is now in effect and would apply to Laclede.

Testifies at Hearing. Yesterday Appelbaum testified he had been in the gas business for 29 years as a worker and that in all his experience, riser connections had always been made by employees of the gas company.

In response to a question by Wayne Ely, St. Louis attorney assisting the Attorney General's office with the injunction suit, Appelbaum said that on June 25, union members voted 185 to 43 to strike. Since then, he said, the votes have been unanimous to continue the strike and the negotiations under the supervision of the United States Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Asked if he ever told the employees not to return to work in spite of the King-Thompson Act, under which the state seized the company July 5, Appelbaum said: "We have been misquoted so much it isn't even funny."

Believes Law Invalid. Ely, pursuing this line of questioning intently, got from the witness the fact that he personally has condemned the King-Thompson Act and believes it to be unconstitutional. Appelbaum added: "We would go back to work tomorrow if we got a settlement with the company."

In an aside, Ely said: "Yes, if you get everything you want."

He had been rebuked previously by Judge Holt for making unsolicited remarks not in the form of objections.

"Are you a member of the Communist party?" Ely asked.

"I can't understand why you even ask a question like that," Appelbaum replied. "The answer is no, emphatically no."

The union officer testified that 1500 copies of letters were distributed to union members for mailing to Rogers. The letters asked questions, prepared by the union attorney, aimed at clarifying the position of the workers under state seizure.

Appelbaum said the union had anticipated state seizure of the utility.

Recording of TV Broadcast. A recording of a television broadcast by Rogers was played in the courtroom. Rogers in the telecast over the Post-Dispatch station KSD-TV last July 5, after state seizure, had said:

"The employees, as I have said, are still employees of the Laclede Gas Co., notwithstanding the fact that the company is under seizure and all of the wage rates and benefits that they have heretofore enjoyed as employees of Laclede Gas Co. they will enjoy even during a seizure, if they return to work."

Following this, Ely continued with his cross examination of Appelbaum asking, "Is it your position to withhold your hire regardless of any provisions of the King-Thompson Act?"

"Members of the union feel they are carrying out a bona fide strike, the right of which is guaranteed to them under the Constitution and under federal laws."

Appelbaum said the union is maintaining 14 emergency crews during the day and six at night to investigate reports of gas leaks and gas stoppages. He was asked why the union maintained such a large number of crews when the company, under normal operations, maintains considerably fewer.

"The company should have more crews," he said, "and offer the same protection the union is offering."

Earlier, Appelbaum had testified that loss of seniority privileges, as provided in the King-Thompson Act for violations of the law by utility strikers, would work economic hardships on many Laclede strikers. Seniority gives workers higher-paying positions, longer vacations and larger pension checks when they retire, he said.

This testimony was brought out by Levin in direct examination in an effort to lay the groundwork for a contention that the King-Thompson Act is unconstitutional.

Judge Holt, in consolidating the state's request for temporary and permanent injunctions, will thereby, make a ruling that will be appealable to the Missouri Supreme Court. His ruling also may contain a declaratory judgment on the constitutionality of the King-Thompson Act.

The union has called a meeting of its membership for tonight at 7 o'clock at 6141 Etzel avenue, Wellston.

Harry Craig and John T. Wiley Jr., labor attorneys, declared last night the King-Thompson Act is unconstitutional because it removes the right of a worker to withhold his hire from a public utility.

They appeared in a telecast on Station KTVI on a program entitled, "Labor Views the News."

They pointed out that State Attorney General John M. Dalton had said the act was unconstitutional in 1951.

GERMAN TOWN DEMANDS U.S. TROOPS BE WITHDRAWN

BAMBERG, Germany, July 13 (AP)—The Bamberg city council yesterday called for a withdrawal of American troops from this ancient Bavarian town. The demand came in the wake of a series of incidents involving United States soldiers. The Bamberg resolution, adressed to the Bonn government, was adopted after seven American soldiers of the Eighty-fifth Infantry Regiment were formally charged with criminally assaulting a 15-year-old girl.

Justice Dept. Now Calls
Dixon-Yates Deal Unlawful

Frequent Reminders.
The President will have "ample opportunity" for explanation "because he'll be reminded of it frequently," Gore said. He added that Mr. Eisenhower was "personally and officially responsible" for the contract and "repeatedly advocated and defended it."

Senator Estes Kefauver, (Dem., Tennessee, another opponent of the Dixon-Yates deal, said the contract "was and is a scandalous thing." He expressed hope that the case would be threshed out in the courts before the elections.

Basically, the Administration reply did the deal.

Rejected an official opinion of Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. on Nov. 4, 1954, that the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 provided sufficient authority for negotiation of the Dixon-Yates contract.

Stated that the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee acted illegally with respect to the contract when the Republicans dominated it in 1954 but switched to a correct legal position after the Democrats took control of the committee in 1955.

Accepted the "conflict of interest" charge made by Democrats against Adolphe H. Wenzell, who acted as consultant to the Bureau of the Budget on negotiating the contract and at the same time advised the First Boston Corp. of New York, the fiscal agent for the Dixon-Yates combine.

Charged that the contract violated the Public Utility Holding Company Act.

Asserted that the contract did not receive proper congressional or regulatory agency approval, particularly by the Joint Atomic Energy Committee and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Aware of Political Dynamic.
There were indications today that the Administration was mindful of the political dynamic in the reply. A Justice Department spokesman, reminded that the language of the document might be picked up as text for a Democratic campaign leaflet, replied that the department might not be able to make every allegation in its reply stick, but that the department was living up to a promise by Brownell that every issue with any substance would be put up to the Court of Claims for decision.

The Dixon-Yates deal was initiated soon after Mr. Eisenhower came into office. Behind it was Lewis L. Strauss, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, and Joseph M. Dodge, then director of the Budget Bureau.

It was intended to meet the growing power needs of the Memphis (Tenn.) area without expanding the Tennessee Valley Authority generating facilities. As propounded by the Administration, the AEC would contract with the private utilities combine to build a steam generating plant at West Memphis, Ark., to feed power to TVA at Memphis as a substitute for TVA power to be taken by the AEC for its installations at Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Paducah, Ky. Thus, private power rather than additional public power would be encouraged.

Edgar H. Dixon, president of Middle South Utilities, and Eugene A. Yates, chairman of the Southern company, teamed up to form a company to handle the deal. Negotiations began in early 1954.

Democrats in Congress denounced the proposed contract but President Eisenhower defended it as a good business arrangement. Democrats charged that it was a device to undercut TVA. Mr. Eisenhower replied there was no intention to damage TVA but that expansion of the agency was not desirable. In 1954, after a filibuster by Democratic Senators lasting 13 days, the Senate approved a section of the new Atomic Energy Act authorizing the AEC to contract with private companies for replacement of TVA power it was taking.

But Democrats continued their fight, asserting that the section did not give sufficient statutory power for the contract. Brownell ruled that it did, a position he reversed yesterday.

In November 1954, after Democrats took control of Congress but before the new Congress was organized, the Republican-controlled Joint Atomic Energy Committee voted along party lines to waive a 30-day waiting period specified for any AEC contract, as it had the power to do under the law. But in January 1955, when the Democrats took over the committee majority, they rescinded the waiver.

Waiver Termed Illegal.
In its reply to the Dixon-Yates suit, the Administration said that the waiver by the Republicans was illegal because Congress was not in session at the time and because the contract before committee was not in final form.

It was not until February 1955 that Democrats found out that Wenzell was counselling both the Government and the outside financial interests in the contract negotiations.

On July 11, 1955, the City of Memphis decided to build its own steam generating plant rather than take power from the Dixon-Yates generators. Mr. Eisenhower said this was a good idea and canceled the Dixon-Yates deal. Then the Dixon-Yates combine went to court to try to recover funds spent in connection with the project. Democrats insisted they should not be paid because the deal was illegal. They demanded that the Administration defend the suit on that ground.

Wenzell, at last reports, was employed by the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

The Administration reply to Dixon-Yates asserted that "the contract is in violation of the statutes of the United States and is unlawful, null and void and contrary to public policy." As a major reason for this conclusion, it cited the dual activities of Wenzell and said that officials of the Dixon-Yates combine had full knowledge of the "dual role."

"During periods in the years 1953 and 1954," the brief said, "Wenzell was employed by the Bureau of the Budget as a consultant with respect to problems concerning the furnishing, operation and expansion of electric facilities in the area of the TVA and concerning important aspects of the project involved in the alleged agreement (the Dixon-Yates contract)."

"For a portion of said time, the Bureau of the Budget was, in collaboration with the Atomic Energy Commission, actively engaged in the consideration and development of the project subsequently embodied in the alleged agreement."

"During said period, Wenzell consulted with, advised and represented the Government in certain important matters involved in the negotiations with respect to the alleged agreement and the project covered thereby, including the cost of the project and the costs involved in the sale by plaintiff (Dixon-Yates) of its securities to financial institutions in order to finance the project."

"During the same period Wenzell was, at all times, a salaried vice president of First Boston Corp., who consulted with, advised and represented the First Boston Corp. with respect to its relation to said project, the alleged agreement, and its relations with plaintiff (Dixon-Yates)."

Advised Dixon-Yates.

"During this period Wenzell further consulted with and advised plaintiff with respect to various matters relating to the project and the alleged agreement, which involved to a material extent the same matters concerning which he was employed to consult with, advise and represent the Government, and in fact, he assisted in negotiating and promoting the very project and alleged agreement between plaintiff and defendant (the Government) which resulted in the employment by plaintiff of First Boston Corp. on behalf of plaintiff and as plaintiff's agent to effect the sale to various banks and insurance companies of plaintiff's securities, in an aggregate principal amount between $99,815,000 and $120,000,000 proposed to be issued . . . to finance said project."

Summarizing Wenzell's activities, the brief said: "The role played by Wenzell in consulting with, advising and representing the Government, the First Boston Corp., and plaintiff with respect to the same project and the same alleged agreement, with contemplated benefits to the First Boston Corp., as well as to plaintiff, involved a conflict of interest so contrary to public policy as to render the alleged agreement null and void."

MILLIUS FOR PLAIN SPEAKING ABOUT PRESIDENT'S HEALTH

William B. Millius, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress, Second District, declared last night that the Democrats should "speak more plainly" about President Eisenhower's health.

Addressing an Eleventh Ward Democratic meeting at 7129 South Broadway, Millius, a Clayton alderman, said recent pictures of the President do not make him appear in better physical condition than before his operation.

"A vote for Eisenhower would be a vote for (Vice President) Nixon," the candidate said. "Even now the ticket should read Nixon and Sherman Adams."

EAST ST. LOUIS BOY, 5, HIT BY AUTO; LEG, HEAD INJURED

Donald Gischer, a 5-year-old East St. Louis boy, suffered a broken left leg, head injuries and multiple abrasions when he was struck yesterday by an automobile in the 1000 block of North Eighteenth street, East St. Louis.

The driver, who said he was Richard Rodrian, Caseyville, Ill., told police he was driving north at 25 miles an hour when the boy suddenly dashed in front of his car from the sidewalk and he was unable to avoid hitting him.

Donald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand J. Gischer, 117 North Seventeenth street, was taken to St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis.

INQUIRY ORDERED ON SPEECH SENT TO POSTMASTERS

House Committee to Investigate Proposed Talk Praising Administration.

By SAM J. SHELTON JR.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 13—An investigation to determine if any federal law was violated in the sending of a model speech praising the Eisenhower Administration by the Post Office Department to postmasters will be conducted by the House Subcommittee on Legal and Monetary Affairs, Representative Frank M. Karsten (Dem.), of St. Louis, said today.

Karsten said he had been informed by Representative Robert H. Mollohan (Dem.), West Virginia, chairman of the subcommittee, that the inquiry had been ordered.

The Missouri Congressman had written Mollohan July 5 calling attention to an article in the Post-Dispatch June 20 reporting that the model speech praising the Eisenhower Administration and the "dynamic leadership" of Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield had been sent from the Post Office's regional office in St. Louis to first and second class postmasters in Missouri, Iowa and Arkansas.

Acknowledging receipt of Karsten's letter, Mollohan wrote: "I have directed the subcommittee immediately to undertake an inquiry into the matter to determine if any violation of federal law has occurred."

Karsten first had asked the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee to conduct an investigation to determine if the sending of the speech was a violation of the Hatch Act.

Representative Tom Murray (Dem.), of Tennessee, chairman of the committee, replied, however, that it was not within the committee's jurisdiction.

Karsten then suggested the investigation be made by the subcommittee on Legal and Monetary Affairs of the House Government Operations Committee.

George J. Gross, assistant to the regional director of the Post Office in St. Louis, said he received the prepared speech from Washington and sent it last Aug. 30 to the postmasters.

WOMAN IN 'PIGEON DROP' WON'T BE PROSECUTED

The circuit attorney's office refused yesterday to issue a warrant against Mrs. Ruth Kirschbaum, 34-year-old divorcee from New York, who was arrested Wednesday on suspicion of attempting to work the "pigeon drop" swindle on a woman shopper.

Assistant Circuit Attorney Edward W. Sumner Jr. told the Post-Dispatch the warrant was denied because of insufficient evidence, and because Mrs. Mary Ready, of the 6100 block of Victoria avenue, did not want to appear as the prosecution witness against Mrs. Kirschbaum.

Mrs. Ready had called a policeman after Mrs. Kirschbaum and a woman companion approached her at Seventh and St. Charles street, showed her some money and asked her if she had some. Mrs. Kirschbaum was arrested but her companion fled. Police are holding Mrs. Kirschbaum for authorities at New York, where she is wanted as a parole violator, they said.

SIDNEY SALOMON JR. CALLED IN CAMPAIGN FUND INQUIRY

Sidney A. Salomon Jr., St. Louis insurance company executive, today was subpoenaed to appear next Tuesday before a federal grand jury which is investigating 1952 election campaign contributions and expenditures by Missouri Congressmen.

Records already before the grand jury show Salomon contributed substantially to the successful campaign of United States Senator Stuart Symington (Dem.) and also was an active worker. Subpoenas also were issued for E. E. Pershall, business executive, and Sidney Maestre, banker, both on the St. Louis Citizens Committee for Symington. They are scheduled to be heard Monday.

Also to be heard Monday are Stanley P. Botner Jr., of Columbia, Mo., former administrative assistant to Senator James P. Kem (Rep.), whom Symington defeated, and W. D. Shank, Kansas City, treasurer of Kem's campaign.

SECRET SERVICE WARNS OF COUNTERFEIT $5 BILLS

A warning that counterfeit $5 bills have been discovered in some cities was issued today by Garry W. Stigall, special agent in charge of the United States Secret Service Bureau here.

The bogus notes have a large G in the seal on the face. Face plate numbers are J-171 and 0231 in the lower right corner. Back plate numbers are 2117, 2102 and 8225. Stigall said. They are purported to be issued by the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago.

None of the bills has been discovered here, Stigall said, adding that if anyone gets one of them, he should call police immediately.

Polk County Assessor. Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 13—Rodney Sterling (Dem.) of Bolivar, was appointed yesterday by Gov. Phil M. Donnelly as county assessor of Polk county, for the unexpired term of Jesse Matthews (Rep.) of Bolivar, who resigned. Matthews informed the Governor he was resigning because of ill health.

WORK STARTS ON FIRST U.S. NUCLEAR MEDICAL CENTER

UPTON, N.Y., July 13 (AP)—Work got under way here yesterday on the nation's first medical research center designed solely to serve the nuclear age.

The $5,000,000 center will include a nuclear reactor built especially for medical research and therapy, and will be a part of the Atomic Energy Commission's Brookhaven National Laboratory.

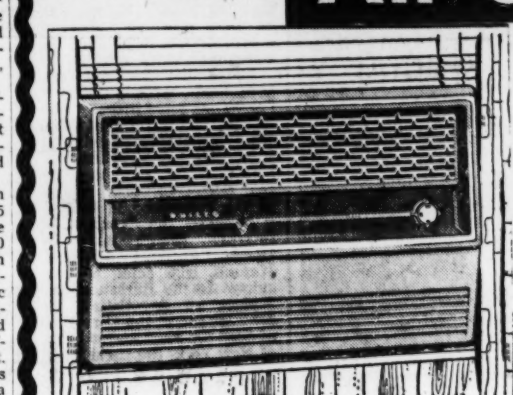

The one-story center, expected to be completed in 1958, will spread over nearly three acres of Long Island. It will house research laboratories for medical physics, pathology, micro-biology, biochemistry and physiology. It also will include a 48-bed research hospital and an industrial medicine branch for Brookhaven personnel.

RADFORD SAYS NEW ARMS CUTS MAY BE POSSIBLE

Source of Order Unknown.

It was not learned who issued the stop order, but it was assumed that either Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson or Reuben B. Robertson Jr., the deputy secretary, had intervened. They could exert authority over planning the "new look" in defense for the fiscal years 1958, 1959 and 1960. The service chiefs have been engaged in the planning for about two months.

Highly reliable reports in the Pentagon were to the effect that the Army was bracing itself for a possible cut of 80,000 to 100,000 men in fiscal 1958, beginning July 1, 1957. It was estimated that a reduction of 100,000 men would mean the withdrawal of 40,000 men from overseas bases.

Some Senate sources have heard that the Army, under the reported Radford plan, would reduce its forces by 450,000 men by 1960. Rumors of the planning "stop" order have reached some Senators, too.

One Senator said that under so-called Defense Department guide lines for fiscal 1958 the Army was originally slated for a 200,000-man cut in the year, but recently this was cut in half.

Adm. Radford was reported to be giving the impression to colleagues that he had President Eisenhower's support for his general objectives, although it was believed his highly controversial memorandum on the reductions had not been read by the President.

(White House press secretary, James C. Hagerty, when asked at Gettysburg, Pa., about the situation replied, "I don't know anything about it.")

Chairman Carl Vinson (Dem.), Georgia, of the House Armed Services Committee told the United Press Adm. Radford had pledged in January, 1955, that the military manpower would not be cut below 2,850,000 for five to 50 years. Vinson said he had received similar pledges from other high military and Defense Department leaders that the services would not be shrunk below 2,850,000 for years to come.)

Views Summarized.

Sources familiar with Radford's concept and views as expressed to his colleagues said they might be summarized as follows:

1. The protection of the United States economy is an overriding requirement and in the 1960 period the defense budget will have to be held under 40 billion dollars.

2. The objectives in the period would be to reduce the armed forces by figures on this order: Army, 450,000; Navy and Marine Corps, 200,000; Air Force, 150,000 (virtually all in Tactical Air Command).

3. Any war most likely would be a general one, short, violent and involving nuclear weapons.

4. Consequently Army forces overseas, including the five divisions supporting this country's participation in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, would be reduced, as one source said, to "small token forces that would wave the flag." Such forces would be smaller than division size and would have atomic weapons.

5. In a war the Army would not be committed, except for token forces, because both mobilization day and D-day would be simultaneous. Hence the decisive action might take place before the Army could be shipped overseas.

6. The National Guard and Army Reserves would be employed in civil defense and related roles.

7. The Strategic Air Command would be the dominant force. The Tactical Air Command could be reduced, especially in the elements earmarked for support of the Army.

8. The Navy's primary mission would be anti-submarine warfare.

The Army's estimated strength as of last June 30 was 1,040,250 men. Actual figures are not yet compiled, but spokesmen said actual strength is now about 1,030,000. A reduction of 450,000 would mean an Army of 580,000 men by 1960.

The Navy's estimated strength for June 30 was 682,774 and the Marine Corps' 201,000, making a total of 883,774. Under the Radford proposal this would be cut to 683,774 by 1960.

The Air Force is undergoing a planned growth from 131 to 137 wings by June 30, 1957. On June 30 it had an estimated strength of 916,000 men. The Strategic Air Command would be built up and maintained as planned, but the reduction of 150,000 from a planned total of 970,000 airmen would mean an Air Force in 1960 of about 820,000 men.

A canvass of the defense picture at various levels in the Pentagon and in some civilian quarters of the Administration indicated a marked emphasis on modernization. Both civilian and military officials used this word to explain the process now going on—to press for a modernization of weapons in all categories so as to gain maximum firepower with guided and ballistic missiles and supersonic aircraft.

HOFFMAN NAMED U.S. DELEGATE TO U.N. ASSEMBLY

whether Mr. Eisenhower had been informed of the speech.

A reporter described Knowland as "more of an isolationist than the Administration" and asked if any "intra-party politics" were involved in the nomination.

Hagerty replied that he did not accept the definition of Knowland as an isolationist and declined to comment on the rest of the question.

The question of admitting Communist China to the U.N. has caused a difference of opinion between this country and some of its allies.

The other two nominations of principal delegates were likely to cause little discussion.

Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. of Massachusetts, chief United States representative to the U.N., was named to head the delegation.

Red Cross President.

The fifth nomination was Ellsworth Bunker of Vermont, president of the American National Red Cross and former United States Ambassador to Argentina and Italy.

Named as alternates were: James J. Wadsworth of New York, deputy United States representative to the U.N. since 1953.

Richard Lee Jones of Chicago, ambassador of Liberia since May, 1955.

Frank C. Nash of Washington, an attorney and former special assistant to the Secretaries of Defense and the Navy.

Edward S. Greenbaum of Princeton, N.J., an attorney.

Mrs. Oswald B. Lord of New York, an alternate delegate to the General Assembly since 1953.

STEEL PARLEYS END TILL MONDAY WITHOUT RESULT

'No Change,' U S W
Head Says — Industry
Group Meets With Mediators.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 13 (AP)—Negotiators trying to break a deadlock in the 13-day-old nation-wide steel strike met for 2½ hours today but United Steelworkers president David J. McDonald said, "There's been no change in the situation."

Immediately after the joint meeting recessed, the industry negotiating team went into a private conference with federal mediators who had been standing by.

Joseph F. Finnegan, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, said the caucus was arranged at the request of industry negotiators.

Meet for an Hour.

The industry-government meeting lasted about an hour. Finnegan said industry negotiators summarized developments of today's meeting with the union but he added: "It would be unwise to comment on the report at this time." He and his two aids plan to return to Washington tonight.

Finnegan said he would report to Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell, but added he sees no reason at this time to make a personal report to President Eisenhower. He said he "certainly would" report to the President without being asked if he felt the situation warranted it.

Union and company representatives said their meeting will resume Monday morning. John A. Stephens, vice president of United States Steel Corp. and chief industry negotiator, had no comment as he left the meeting.

Finnegan said mediators had no plans at present to caucus with the union unless such a session is requested. McDonald said he did not plan to make such a request.

Union Wants Agreement.
McDonald restated his desire to negotiate an agreement that would end the strike and send his 650,000 basic steelworkers back to work. He added that as of now he could foresee no developments over the weekend.

Negotiations were resumed yesterday in a two-hour preliminary session. There was no comment from McDonald or Stephens after the meeting yesterday. There was no indication whether the industry had come up with a new offer or if the union had changed its position. The industry has offered at 52-month contract which it would give the workers a 17½ cent hourly package pay boost in the first year. The union, whose members averaged $2.46 an hour, estimated the first year package value at 14 cents an hour.

As the strike neared the end of its second week, about 70,000 workers in allied industries—chiefly railroads and coal—have been furloughed. In Washington, Secretary of Commerce Weeks said the nation's economy, as a whole, has been affected very little. He added:

"If the public welfare is affected and the strike situation goes on long enough, we will have to do something under the Taft-Hartley Act or any other means available, or ask Congress to provide powers for action."

RUSSIA SAYS U.S. BARRED ENTRY OF SCLEROSIS VACCINE

The New York Times News Service.
(Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

MOSCOW, July 13—United States authorities were charged in Russia yesterday with barring the importation of a Soviet-made vaccine for multiple sclerosis that had been requested by a sufferer from that disease.

An article in the newspaper Sovetskaya Rossiya charged that United States health officials declared that the vaccine was new and therefore was barred. It was said that ampules of the vaccine lay in the customs house in Tacoma, Wash., for six months and then were returned to Moscow.

The drug was said to have been for Haskell Field of Tacoma. The article said the vaccine has been sold in Russia since 1946 and has been exported to many Western countries.

In Washington, a spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration acknowledged that the drug had been refused entry.

He said the government had "no information" on the drug's composition and no assurance that it would be safe to use under the prescribed conditions.

DEATH TO NON-BELIEVERS SECT ELECTS 3 TO DIET

TOKYO, July 13 (AP)—A militant sect threatening death to non-believers has succeeded in electing three of its missionaries to Parliament.

The three members of the Soka Gakkai organization polled about 800,000 votes in this week's election. Scores of their campaign workers were arrested on charges of election violations.

Soka Gakkai wants to become the state religion of Japan. The name literally means "value creating academy." Its creed is derived from Buddhism, but its activities are more evangelistic. One slogan is "Let's convert everyone with words and arrows."

HOUSE APPROVES PAYMENT HIKES FOR VETERANS

Increase for Disabled Is Unanimous — Bill Would Add $172,000,000 to VA Costs.

WASHINGTON, July 13 (AP)—Despite Administration opposition, the House voted unanimously yesterday for a general increase of around 10 per cent in payments to some 2,000,000 veterans disabled by their military service.

The roll call vote of 391 to 0 sent the compensation bill to the Senate where it faces an uncertain future this late in the session.

Offered by Chairman Olin E. Teague (Dem., Texas), of the Veterans' Affairs Committee, the measure would add an estimated $172,000,000 the first year to Veterans' Administration compensation payments now running at $1,800,000,000 a year. The bill's costs would decrease in later years.

The VA and the Bureau of the Budget, representing the White House, said the bill was not needed because the cost of living has only gone up one-half of one per cent since Congress last voted for compensation increases. That was in 1954, also an election year.

The Teague bill for the service-disabled was a unanimous passage after 10 minutes' debate that was a calm contrast to the last month's House battle over a broader, more expensive measure providing increased payments for veterans not disabled in service.

$90 Pension Monthly. The latter bill, as sent to the Senate, would grant a $90 a month pension to any World War I veteran at age 65 whose income falls below certain limits.

Action on other bills included:

The Senate passed a bill to authorize construction of the Frypan-Arkansas reclamation project in Colorado at a cost of $156,000,000. Passage came on a voice vote. There were no objections.

The measure now goes to the House where similar legislation is scheduled for consideration today by the Rules Committee.

The Frypan-Arkansas project is planned to gather water from the Upper Roaring Fork and Frypan rivers on the western slope of Colorado and bring them through a six-mile tunnel under the continental divide to the Arkansas river valley on the eastern slope of the mountains. Supplemental irrigation water will be provided 322,000 acres in southwestern Colorado.

Besides the irrigation, the project would furnish additional domestic and industrial water supplies for Pueblo, Colorado Springs and other cities in the Arkansas basin in Colorado.

Six Power Plants. Six power plants are planned for the project, between the mountains and Pueblo, having a generating capacity of 93,000 kilowatts.

An Administration bill for more liberal credit to low income and part-time farmers was passed by the Senate by voice vote.

It and a companion farm credit measure go back to the House now for consideration of numerous Senate amendments.

President Eisenhower and Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson had asked for both measures as part of the Administration program for aiding farmers.

The first measure would increase the total limit on Government-insured loans from $10,000 to $20,000, remove a present limit on initial loans of $7,000, and give Benson broad powers to compromise settlement or extend repayment periods on loans in disaster or drought areas.

The second bill would authorize a merger of the Intermediate Credit Banks and the Production Credit Associations. The Senate unanimously approved an Administration request for an increase of more than 60,000 officers of the Air Force and Army who may have regular career commissions.

The legislation, which now goes back to the House for action on minor Senate amendments, would permit both the Air Force and Army to have permanent commissions for half of their officers serving on active duty. The Navy and Marine Corps already have authorizations for regular commissions for half of all active duty officers.

1.5 Billion Money Bill. The House passed by voice vote and sent to the Senate a bill appropriating $1,555,539,305 for miscellaneous federal activities most of it for military construction.

There was little controversy over the $1,447,450,000 for Army, Navy and Air Force construction in the United States and abroad. The bill's total was $322,690,000 more than President Eisenhower had requested, but the increase was offset by cancellation of previously appropriated funds in excess of $365,000,000.

Included in the total was $44,920,000 for construction of a new State Department Building and $49,000,000 to build a new home for the Central Intelligence Agency.

The Senate Interior Committee approved legislation which would reaffirm state control of water within its boundaries. The bill would spell out state supremacy over the Federal Government in control of all waters, underground and on navigable and non-navigable streams.

It brought about a split between some government departments. The Interior Department and the Agriculture Department supported the bill. The Justice Department, and the Defense Department, opposed it. The Justice Department contends the bill is unconstitutional.

BILL FOR 40-HOUR WEEK ON ALL CITY JOBS INTRODUCED

Requested by Firemen Who Work 67½ — Board Delays Recess Over Garage Issue.

A bill that would provide a maximum 40-hour work week for all city employees, including firemen, was introduced today in the Board of Aldermen.

Aldermen Edgar J. Feely and William C. Brady, who introduced the measure at the request of the Fire Fighters Union, pointed out that firemen now work an average of 67½ hours a week. The measure would also cover some hospital and institutional employees who work a 44-hour week.

It was generally understood that if the measure passes, several hundred additional firemen will have to be employed by the city.

The board voted to delay adjournment for the regular summer recess at the request of Alderman James W. Noonan, majority floor leader and chairman of the zoning committee. A final meeting was scheduled for next Friday.

Noonan said the zoning committee hoped by next Friday to have completed hearings on bills needed for construction of municipal parking garages in the downtown area.

A motion was approved to ask the City Counselor for a formal opinion as to whether the 1951 parking meter ordinance conflicts with the city's master traffic plan of 1953.

RED LEADER SURRENDERS IN MALAYA; HE'S 'FED UP'

IPOH, Malaya, July 13 (AP)—Lee Yun, top-ranking Communist leader in Perak state, surrendered last night to a British mining engineer.

Yun, tired and in rags, stopped the engineer and asked for a lift to the police station, where he said he was "fed up" with the Communists.

He had a price on his head of 12,000 Malayan dollars ($4048). But the engineer, F. L. Tait, will get only $500 ($175 United States) of it. Police said he didn't capture the rebel, merely acted as an escort.

Libby's make 'em
good eaters!

Baby likes the way Libby's go down so sm-o-o-th

So much, much, SMOOTHER... Libby's are the easiest-eating baby foods

LITTLE GALS—and little guys, too—make short work of feeding time when you feed them Libby's because Libby's go down so smooth! Only Libby's Baby Foods are put through an extra process to free them of coarse fibers and tiny lumps. (For example, Libby's Carrots are 3 times smoother than any other brand of carrots for babies.) Libby's are homogenized, as well as strained—yet they cost you no more. Because of this extra smoothness, doctors often recommend feeding Libby's as early as the fifth week. So help your baby develop good eating habits early by starting him right—with Libby's. Backed by 88 years of fine food experience.

GREEK CYPRIOTS REJECT BRITISH BID FOR PARLEY

Mayor of Nicosia Says
Any Talks Must Be Held With Exiled
Archbishop.

NICOSIA, July 13 (AP)—A leading Greek Cypriot spokesman today rejected Britain's new overture for negotiations on self-government for the violence-ridden island colony. He said the British will have to talk with exiled Greek Orthodox Archbishop Makarios.

Themistocles Dervis, mayor of Nicosia and general secretary of the Greek Nationalist party, said Greek Cypriot leaders would refuse to meet with Britain's Lord Radcliffe, who is coming here to start work on a new constitution for Cyprus.

"We shall not meet him," said Dervis. "The Archbishop is the only one who has anything to say."

Makarios was deported to the Seychelles islands in the Indian ocean by the British last March after they accused him of forming rebel violence here.

Another Greek Cypriot leader said Britain's latest appeal offered "no solution at all" and termed it "a trick."

In London, Laborite members of Parliament called for a showdown on the Eden government's Cyprus policy. The Conservatives agreed to a full debate in the House of Commons next Thursday. It is expected to provoke one of the hottest parliamentary clashes in months.

Laborite Charges.
Laborite leaders have charged the Eden government with making concessions "too little and too late" on the Cyprus issue.

The new government proposals also have been received with only faint praise in some Conservative quarters in Britain.

Dervis claimed he voiced the views of all Greek mayors and deputy mayors on Cyprus in opposing talks with Radcliffe.

Dervis challenged the statement made yesterday by Sir John Harding, British military governor, that Cypriots are weary of violence and that extremists are beginning to crack.

The mayor said such British measures as collective fines and curfews "have only excited the people more." Dervis blamed the British for arousing violence of Eoka, the Greek Cypriot underground.

The mayor said the United States is also to blame for the situation on Cyprus. Dervis declared that in the United Nations the United States "voted against us and got other nations to vote against us. We have no confidence in American policy. We have more confidence in English people than Americans."

In Ankara, members of parliament belonging to Premier Menderes's ruling Democratic party repeated that if Britain changes the status quo on Cyprus the island should revert to Turkey.

Speech to Parliament.
The latest British moves came in a speech to Parliament by Prime Minister Eden and a radio broadcast here by Harding.

The military governor appealed to Cypriots to "tackle this problem one step at a time" with patience and common sense.

Eden's statement contained no reference to self-determination for Cyprus, the top demand of Cypriots seeking to end British rule and join the island with Greece. Eden said Britain will press plans for self-government, but not "until terrorism has been overcome."

He also rejected suggestions that the Cyprus dispute be put before the North Atlantic Treaty Organization now, a course reportedly favored by the United States.

Eden said the constitutional framework to be drafted by Radcliffe will include "safeguards for the interests of all communities."

In Athens, Greek Premier Karamanlis said Greece was determined to appeal the Cyprus question to the United Nations.

He said Eden's statement "laid down the British government policy. . . . Greece has laid down her own policy. She determinedly demands before the United Nations self-determination for Cyprus."

RICE-STIX AND TEAMSTERS CONTRACT IS REINSTATE

Reinstatement of all terms of a five-year contract between Local 688 of the AFL-CIO Teamsters and Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co., suspended in part for 15 months by mutual consent, was announced yesterday by Harold J. Gibbons, secretary-treasurer of the union. The contract expires Feb. 28, 1958.

The reinstatement will give some benefits to members of the union, who skipped six pay increases and held in abeyance a pension and insurance plan. They will receive a 7-cent hourly pay increase, retroactive to May 1, another 7 cents next Dec. 1 and a similar rise Dec. 1, 1957. The pension and insurance program is again effective.

Suspension of the contract was designed to aid the St. Louis management of Rice-Stix in a stock fight with other groups that the local ownership subsequently lost and to cope with then prevailing market conditions. Negotiations were to be reopened when the company showed a 5 per cent profit on its capital investment.

British Flyers Bails Out of Jet.
NICOSIA, Cyprus, July 13 (AP)—British Vice Marshal Clayton D. C. Boyce, air officer commanding the Levant, and his pilot bailed out of a disabled jet fighter Vampire trainer plane today off the north coast of Cyprus. They were plucked out of Morphou bay by a helicopter after 40 minutes in the water.

DEPORTED BRITISH WRITER APPEARS ON MOSCOW RADIO

LONDON, July 13 (AP)—Cedric Beltrage, British-born writer deported from the United States because of Communist connections, is now broadcasting for the Moscow radio. His broadcast from Moscow today was the first indication he had gone to Russia.

In his broadcast he indicated that Russia has quit jamming United States and British broadcasts. He said the Voice of America is popular in Russia "as long as it plays music, which it does for two hours a day."

Beltrage, editor of the weekly National Guardian and former Hollywood writer, was arrested for deportation in 1953 but was not expelled until last August. The United States Immigration Service said that after entering the United States in 1937 he "was a member of or affiliated with the Communist party."

NEW... Pushbutton Controlled SUDS RETURN SYSTEM

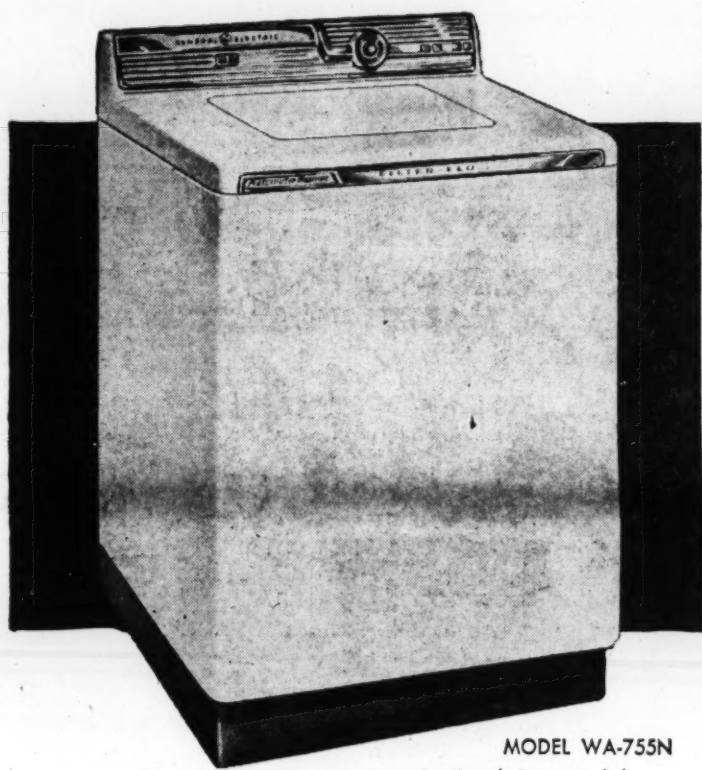

Makes the NEW General Electric

"FILTER-FLO"

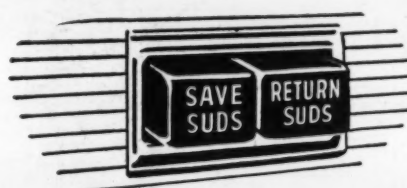

AUTOMATIC WASHER

Distributor's Recommended
Prices & Terms

1. Push button to save suds
2. Push button to return hot, sudsy water for a second wash.

NO OTHER AUTOMATIC HAS ALL THESE NEW FEATURES

FILTER-FLO

—Wash water circulates and filters 5 times to bring you brighter, cleaner clothes. Soap scum floats away... sand settles out at the bottom of the washbasket... lint is trapped in the filter which lets only clean, filtered water flow back into the washbasket. Removes lint, sand and soap scum as it washes.

AUTOMATIC SUDS RETURN SYSTEM

—Hot, sudsy filtered water that is cleaned and recleaned during the first wash can be used again for a second wash! This economy washing cuts down your water heating bills and saves the expense of many pounds of detergent. Completely automatic!

NEW "DELICATE" CYCLE WASHING

—Choice of 2 washing cycles... one for regular family wash... and one for fine fabrics and delicate synthetics. All you do is set one dial, the washer does the rest—automatically! No worry about nylons, synthetics, or any washable fabric.

CHOICE OF WARM OR COLD RINSE

—Just touch a pushbutton to get the usual warm water rinse, or a cold water rinse that saves gallons of hot water.

WATER SAVER CONTROL

—For those small or "in between" loads... saves gallons of hot water and detergent. Saves up to 20 gallons during complete cycle.

M. FLORMAN FACING $234,898 IN TAX CLAIMS

Appeal Discloses U.S. Income Levy Charges for Years 1946 Through 1949.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 13—Tax claims totaling $234,898 for the years 1946 through 1949 have been made against Herbert M. Florman, former president of Associated Transport Inc., it was shown in an appeal filed in United States tax court here.

The claim by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue alleged Florman overpaid taxes of $55,941 for 1946 and 1947 and penalties of $35,443 for those two years.

The tax deficiency alleged for 1948 and 1949 against Florman and his wife, Ruth, totaled $91,554 with penalties of $51,901.

In 1946, as shown by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue income claim, Florman reported income of $26,163 when his actual income allegedly was $80,931.

In each of the four years, some of the additional unreported income was derived from turning assets of Associated Transport to his own use, the tax claim alleged. In 1946 Florman reported income of $38,844 from a partnership in E. B. Jones Motor Co., when his actual income allegedly was $121,015, it was alleged.

For 1948 Florman reported total income of $57,039 when it should have been $125,252 and for 1949 he reported $36,149 when his actual income was $121,015, it was alleged.

The tax deficiency for 1948 was reported as $42,008 and for 1949 as $49,545.

The penalties in each case included 50 per cent of the tax deficiency, and 6 per cent for making a substantial understatement of estimated tax or for failure to pay estimated tax on time.

Florman, in his petition to the tax court, asked for a determination of the tax deficiency. He said he was president of Associated Transport during the years in question, but that all his stock in the firm later was sold.

Florman was fined $10,000 when he pleaded guilty before the late United States District Judge Ruben M. Hulen April 16, 1954, of evading payment of $28,871 in income taxes. A one-year sentence was suspended and he was placed on probation for five years.

He was charged with making fraudulent tax returns for his firm for the years 1947 and 1948. Probation was granted because of a serious heart condition.

SOVIET ENVOY IS CRITICIZED FOR STATEMENT ON GRECE

ATHENS, July 13 (UPI)—A Greek Foreign Ministry spokesman criticized Soviet Ambassador Michael Seragev today for saying Greece had shown a lack of understanding on the Corfu straits issue with Albania.

"Never has an Ambassador violated in such a manner his prescribed functions," the spokesman said. He added that the "outside" usual critics for an Ambassador to criticize the government to which he is accredited.

Seragev recently told newsmen the Corfu issue was "connected with other problems on which the Greeks had no shown understanding." He said Albania on the other hand had shown good will.

MAN ABANDONS AUTO, WALKS INTO RIVER AND DISAPPEARS

A man thought to be Joseph Stoerk, a barber, 3726A South Compton avenue, apparently drowned today after walking into the water under the MacArthur bridge near the foot of Chouteau avenue.

Witnesses saw the man float in the water and disappear from sight. A preliminary search of the area by the United States Coast Guard was fruitless. An automobile belonging to Stoerk was found abandoned on the levee under the bridge. Police found a note in the car, signed by "Joe," which indicated he intended to end his life.

Woman in Government.

KARACHI, July 13 (AP)—A feminist leader was appointed a deputy minister of the West Pakistan Provincial Government yesterday. She is the Begum Gulam Ahmad Khan, widow of a Muslim doctor who died in 1951. She is the first woman appointed a minister since Pakistan became independent in 1947.

Pakistan Proposes U.S. Set Up Permanent Food Bank for Asia

1,000,000 Tons of Rice, Wheat Would Be Housed in Storage Granaries—Any Nation Could Borrow in Emergency.

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan, July 13.—Pakistan has urged the United States to set up a permanent food bank in this country to fight famine throughout Asia. The Karachi government also plans to put its idea before the Southeast Asia Collective Defense Treaty organization. Pakistani officials believe that the proposal is the best way to give the economic co-operation aspect of the treaty a concrete meaning and dramatize its importance to people in this part of the world.

Pakistan is reported to have told the United States that hunger remains Asia's greatest enemy. In East Pakistan, a rice famine is starving millions and enriching black marketers.

Marginal Food Output. For years to come, Pakistan and other Asia countries will remain marginal food producers. The regional food bank plan is designed to give Asians assurance that in time of disaster the governments will have emergency supplies and will not have to wait for rice and wheat to be shipped thousands of miles.

This is the Pakistani plan: The United States would set up a bank of a total of 1,000,000 tons of rice and wheat. Storage granaries would be built in West Pakistan and possibly in East Pakistan. Officials here say they would need steel and roofing from the United States but Pakistan could supply cement and other materials and would pay for the labor.

The food in the bank would belong to the United States. In time of emergency any country in the region could borrow from the food bank. Money from food loans would be used to keep the bank's food reserve up to the 1,000,000 ton mark.

Studied By Washington. No announcement of the plan has been made, Pakistan said, because officials are waiting for Washington's reaction. And Washington has to take into account the attitudes of other countries in the area. Rice export countries like Thailand and Burma may oppose the plan on the ground it would undercut their exports.

In Washington, government officials said the food problem of Pakistan rather than Asia is under consideration.

They did not comment, however, on a plan for an over-all Asian food bank.

Jet Craft Promised TO STATE AIR GUARD

Chief of National Unit Says Propeller Planes Will Be Replaced.

By THEODORE P. WAGNER
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CAMP WILLIAMS, Wis., July 13.—An indication that the Missouri Air National Guard, including the 110th Squadron stationed at Lambert-St. Louis Field, will be equipped with jet aircraft, was given here by Maj. Gen. Winston P. Wilson, chief of the Air Guard, during an overnight visit at this training camp.

In an informal talk to officers of the 131st wing last night, Gen. Wilson said that all Air Guard squadrons now flying propeller-type planes will undergo a gradual transition to jet equipment. With reference to the Missouri wing, the Air Guard chief said he could not fix the date or the type of jet planes to be received.

The Missouri Air Guard, formerly a fighter wing, now is equipped with the B-26 light bomber, which proved effective in Korea as a night intruder and in close support of ground troops. The 110th Squadron is authorized 16 planes, plus auxiliary transport aircraft. When the transition takes place, pilots and crews will be sent to school and checked out in jets.

Air Guard units now equipped with jet planes are either fighter or fighter-interceptor wings. It is the hope of Missouri officers that the squadrons at St. Louis and St. Joseph will be designated fighter-interceptor wings with the mission of protecting their respective areas. Air protection of the St. Louis area is now provided by interceptors stationed at Scott Air Force Base.

The Air Guard has proved it can handle jet aircraft, Gen. Wilson said. The Air Guard chief, who is constantly making flying inspections of the 26 Guard wings, said the nation's 65,000 air guardsmen are combat ready.

As a means of increasing operational efficiency, pilots and air crews have been authorized an additional 36 paid drills annually. The extra drills, usually involving night flying and night operational problems, are in addition to the 48 regular armory drills and two-week summer camp. An immediate result of the extra work, Gen. Wilson observed, was a lower accident rate because of increased proficiency and knowledge of the equipment.

Camp Williams, one of the newest of the Air Guard training centers, is to be the finest, Gen. Wilson declared. It has beautiful terrain, summer resort weather and ample space for a natural background for modern administrative and barracks buildings.

Gen. Wilson, with an eye for details, is proud of such facilities. Following the inspection here, Gen. Wilson returned to Washington, piloting a cut-down B-26 light bomber he uses on his fast trips around the country.

Meals served in the new mess hall, under the direction of Capt. David H. Bell, 2412 Gas avenue, Overland, have been excellent. The menu includes steaks, chops, eggs, fresh butter, vegetables, fruits and "all the milk you can drink."

There is no coping with a young G.I.'s capacity for food, however. After consuming Capt. Bell's excellently prepared meals, the airmen bought 188 dozen hamburgers at the post exchange for between-meal snacks.

West Point Welcomes Davidson. WEST POINT, N.Y., July 13 (AP)—A 13-gun salute and an honor guard ceremony yesterday welcomed the arrival of Maj. Gen. Garrison Holt Davidson, 52, newly appointed superintendent of the United States Military Academy. He succeeds Lt. Gen. Blackshear M. Bryan, who has been appointed commanding general of the Army in the Pacific.

'CAN'T GRANT ALL WISHES NOW', BULGANIN SAYS

In Time 'We Will Have Everything,' Premier Promises in Pension Discussion.

MOSCOW, July 13 (AP)—Premier Bulganin told the Supreme Soviet today the government cannot now grant all wishes of the people for increased and broadened pension benefits "but the time will come when we will have everything."

Bulganin spoke after the Council of Union, one of the two houses of the Soviet Parliament, concluded its debate on the government's plan to boost pension outlays by 12 billion rubles. The cost is now about 25 billion rubles. The official value of the ruble is 25 cents.

The Premier ignored most amendments suggested from the floor as "unrealistic." He urged approval of the plan as presented by the government, with the addition of a few amendments that had been officially authorized.

During the debate, 23 members of the Council of Union spoke. Thirty-three had asked to speak, but the debate was cut off by unanimous vote. Most of the speakers approved the plan in glowing terms, though several made suggestions for minor changes.

Bulganin ridiculed one suggestion that the eligibility age for one category of pensions be reduced from 60 to 55. He said this would necessarily lower the eligibility age in the hard labor category to 45 years and that this was "unrealistic."

He said that some of the suggestions from the floor were "proposals for our money and spend according to our means. Let's not try to get everything at once. The time will come when we will have everything. We just cannot grant all wishes of the people now."

The deputies, who are supposed to represent a people who have been waiting 39 years for the fruits of the revolution, listened intently.

The Council of Nationalities, the other house, resumes the pension discussion later today. The Council of Union recessed until tomorrow.

Soviet Is a Fake Parliament, USIA Bulletin Says. VIENNA, July 13 (AP)—The United States Information Agency today called the Supreme Soviet now meeting in Moscow a fake parliament.

The USIA declared in its bulletin supplied to United States embassies abroad and to foreign news agencies that the Soviet Union is "not a democracy."

"The Supreme Soviet bears no similarity to parliaments in most other countries. It has one elemental purpose: to provide a facade of legality for the dictates of the Communist party," the bulletin said.

"Radio Moscow has said that the meeting of the legislators will reflect the changed atmosphere of the U.S.S.R. Yet the meeting itself seems almost to have been designed to prove that nothing has really changed—that the Soviet system is still basically the same as it was under Stalin."

Rebel Gen. Ba Cut Dies On Guillotine in Viet Nam. CAN THO, Viet Nam, July 13 (AP)—Rebel Gen. Ba Cut died on the guillotine today after a bitter battle fought against President Ngo Dinh Diem.

The 32-year-old former commander of 10,000 troops from the Hoa Hao religious sect's private army was the most colorful figure in the recent Indochinese history. Actually named Quang Vinh, he chopped off the end of one finger after World War II to dramatize his hatred of the returning French and took the name of Ba Cut—Cut Finger.

When Diem accepted the Geneva armistice which gave North Viet Nam to the Communists, he vowed to keep his units of the Hoa Hao army fighting the Diem government and not to cut his hair. It was down to his shoulders before he was captured.

Japan to Send Shigemitsu to Russian Treaty Talks. TOKYO, July 13 (AP)—The Japanese government today named Foreign Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu, a "go slow" advocate, to head its delegation for the renewal of peace treaty talks with Russia. Tokyo newspapers predicted the talks will begin late this month in Moscow.

Shigemitsu favors a waiting strategy in the negotiations, with a major goal the return of the Kur Republic islands now occupied by Russia. He also is considered pro-American.

Prime Minister Hatoyama and other leaders of his Liberal-Democratic party want a quick agreement with Russia. Hatoyama asked three other men to head the delegation before he turned to Shigemitsu but party squabbles ruled out his earlier selections.

Tax Cut Plea by Meany. WASHINGTON, July 13 (AP)—George Meany, AFL-CIO president, urged Congress yesterday to cut taxes for low and middle income taxpayers and small business.

Meany sent a letter to Democratic House Speaker Wm. W. Celler, of both houses asserting that such a reduction would strengthen purchasing power and stimulate the national economy.

Wounded by Pistol in Auto. Edward Hoffman, 3006A South Jefferson avenue, was treated at City Hospital last night for a gunshot wound of the right thigh which he said resulted from the accidental discharge of his pistol when he was alighting from his automobile at his home.

Hoffman, 36 years old, said he purchased the weapon yesterday and had removed an ammunition clip from it, forgetting that there was one round in the chamber. He was released after treatment.

Five Injured in Collision, Driver Didn't See Stop Sign. Five persons were injured today when an automobile driven by William Honiker, 38 years old, of Oklahoma City, Okla., struck a car police said had failed to stop for a stop sign at the intersection of North Twenty-ninth street and Louisiana boulevard, East St. Louis.

The driver of the second vehicle, Elmer Rannier, 55, 1306 Gladys street, Collinsville, told police he was driving north in the intersection when he saw the sign. His car, struck in the right side, was thrown against a wooden fence in front of 401 North Twenty-ninth. Rannier was treated for cuts and bruises at St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis.

Others taken to St. Mary's for treatment, all of whom were passengers in Honiker's car, were Mrs. Florence Honiker, 73, mother of William, possibly fractured ribs; Mrs. Louis Wyrick, 53, Jefferson City, possible fractured ribs; the left arm; her husband, Louis, cuts and bruises, and Mrs. Annabel Birkhead, 38, 2028 Victor street, cuts and bruises.

4 tasty ideas for tonight's dinner

Heinz Beans

Combined with inexpensive meats in recipes your family will go for

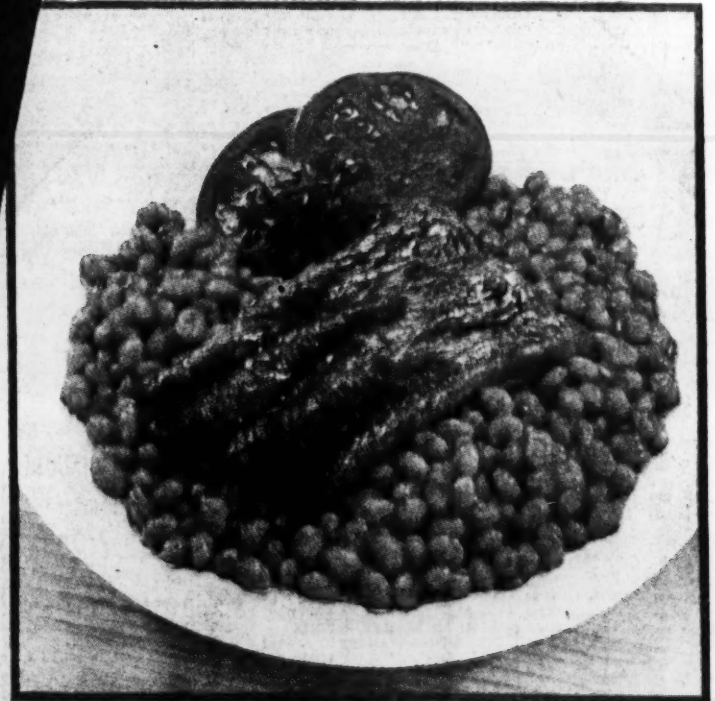

BEAN AND APRICOT BAKE—Combine $\frac{2}{3}$ cup finely cut apricots with 2 regular-size cans Heinz New England Beans (in molasses sauce with pork). Garnish with tiny link pork sausages. Bake at 375° F. for 35 minutes (Serves 6.)

HOT BEAN SANDWICHES—On slice of buttered whole wheat toast spread layer of hot Heinz Vegetarian Beans and Heinz Ketchup; add toast covered with slivers of olives and crisp bacon slices; then top with the third piece of toast, placing the buttered side down.

BROWNED PORK CHOPS and tender, mellow Heinz Beans are another delicious, thrifty go-together dish everybody enjoys. Use your favorite kind of Heinz Beans. For greater economy and convenience, your grocer has them in three sizes: (1) family; (2) regular; (3) individual. Take your pick!

BEANS AND SPARERIBS are a great combination—and an easy, money-saving one. Heat Heinz Beans, top with broiled spareribs and garnish with tomatoes. Heinz fixes four kinds of better-tasting beans: (1) Pork and Beans; (2) Boston Beans; (3) New England Beans; (4) Vegetarian Beans.

Dulles's Top Adviser Criticizes Secretaries Who Make Habit Of Dashing About the World

Dr. Henry M. Wriston, in Article, Says Absences Are Harmful in Forming and Conducting Foreign Policy—Urges Time for 'Perspective and Wisdom.'

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON, July 13 (AP).

THE SHARPEST attack yet made on Secretary of State John Foster Dulles's habit of dashing about the world has come from one of his own top level advisers.

The outspoken counselor is Dr. Henry M. Wriston, president emeritus of Brown University and the man who has done perhaps more than any other to help Dulles reorganize the United States foreign service. He is an adviser on administrative and personnel problems when needed and a member of an advisory committee for the Foreign Service Institute.

In an article in the current issue of Foreign Affairs, a magazine published by the Council on Foreign Relations in New York, Wriston writes that frequent absences of Dulles or any other Secretary of State from his office are positively harmful to the making and conducting of United States foreign policy.

The President does not get the advice he needs, according to Wriston; United States ambassadors abroad are shown up almost as messenger boys and the Secretary loses broad understanding of the problems he must solve.

"The vital requisites for the effective discharge of the duties of the Secretary of State are perspective and wisdom," Wriston wrote. "Those qualities find their most effective employment when there is at least a modicum of leisure for quiet reflection."

Wriston went on to say that perspective and wisdom are not always found in men of "the rugged constitution and physical endurance required for perpetual motion."

Dulles's Travel Record. Dulles, who, since taking office three and a half years ago, has traveled more than 300,000 miles—or better than 11 times around the equator—and visited 38 countries, is famous for his rugged physique.

Dulles defended his traveling yesterday in the course of a brief talk to the Girls' National, a gathering of high school girls sponsored by the American Legion auxiliary.

"Today we all have to travel," he said after pointing out that events in diplomacy now move at high speed and that this is especially true for the United States as the world's foremost power.

"I notice that Khrushchev and Bulganin have traveled more in the last six months than I have. Nowadays when you can fly overnight and have a personal talk with a Foreign Minister it is old fashioned to sit at home. You can accomplish so much more through a personal talk."

Wriston said the problem of conducting diplomacy in modern times should be reviewed and techniques should be reformed "to make it possible for men of normal strength hereafter to carry the load."

He said in a brief telephone interview yesterday at his summer home at Marston's Mills, Mass., that he was not concerned in his article with criticizing Dulles and in fact had pointed out that Dulles had been absent from office less than other Secretaries of State since World War II except for Dean Acheson. The trouble is, Wriston said, that in diplomacy "everybody is traveling today."

Traveling Diplomats. "Look at the last few weeks," he said. "Prime Minister Nehru has just been to London. President Tito has just returned to Belgrade from Moscow. The Shah just got back to Iran from Moscow. Vice President Nixon has just come home from Asia. I would like to see some reform in this international habit."

FRANC AT NEW LOW ON NEWS OF SCHEDULED TAX INCREASE

PARIS, July 13 (AP)—

The French franc dropped to its lowest value in 32 months yesterday. The drop followed the news that the government had decided to ask for $480,000,000 more in taxes in the next 18 months to put down the Algerian revolt.

The black market rate, quoted daily in most French newspapers, was 403 francs to the United States dollar. The official rate is 350. The 20-franc gold piece, a favorite of hoarders, was quoted at 3410 paper francs. The Banque de France announced that circulation of paper currency reached a new record this week.

On the optimistic side, the finance ministry reported that 1955 had been a good year for French foreign trade.

UNESCO REJECTS PROPOSAL TO INVITE RED SATTELITES

PARIS, July 13 (AP)—

The 19-nation executive council of UNESCO yesterday overwhelmingly rejected proposals to invite five Communist powers to send observers to the next general conference.

The conference of the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization will be held in New Delhi. The Soviet Union delegate said he would again bring up the proposed invitations there.

With only the Soviet Union and one satellite power in favor and a few abstentions, the executive committee rejected observers for North Korea, North Viet Nam, East Germany, Outer Mongolia and Red China.

PEARSON Eisenhower's Relative Does Quite Well

Brother-in-Law, Retired Officer, Is Airline's Expediter.

WASHINGTON.

THE least-publicized relative of President Eisenhower, his brother-in-law, Col. Gordon Moore, is a soft-spoken, mild-mannered, retired Army officer who sits in a well-appointed office in Washington's Walker building.

Moore is gray-haired, well-groomed, self-effacing—almost the typical retired Army officer transplanted to civilian life. He has none of the vivaciousness of his sister-in-law, Mamie, or his wife, Mike, who is Mamie's sister.

Officially, he is an expeditor of airline business and a lender of money to non-scheduled airlines.

When you examine his business and compare it with his precarious pecuniary status shortly before his brother-in-law entered the White House, however, the conclusion is inescapable that he has done well.

In Transit Sale.

Moore's name was passed around Washington financial circles last week as a result of the $13,540,000 sale of the Capital Transit Co.

For months, various groups had made offers to buy Washington's bus and streetcar system. Then suddenly, an offer was accepted from O. Roy Chalk, millionaire owner of Trans-Caribbean Airways. Similar or better offers were rejected.

In putting across his sudden deal to run the transit system, Chalk had the assistance of both Moore and his attorney, Edward F. Colladay, close to the Republican National Committee.

It has been established that Moore introduced Chalk to Robert C. Baker, executive director of the American Security and Trust and a Capital Transit director; that he telephoned Harry McDonald, a rival bidder, and urged him to get together with Chalk, not compete with him, and Moore has acknowledged that he had helped put the deal across "in a small way."

The careers of Chalk and the President's brother-in-law have been intertwined ever since the spring of 1952 when Chalk took a gamble that Mr. Eisenhower would be the next president. At that time, Moore's economic fortunes were at a low ebb.

Public Relations Job. At this point Chalk hired Moore for $6500 to handle public relations for the independent Military Air Transport Association.

Moore was hired three times and fired twice before the Republican convention in 1952. He was fired and rehired as Gen. Eisenhower's fortunes ebbed and flowed. The last time he was fired by the Military Transportation Association Chalk stepped in and hired him directly for Trans-Caribbean. They went to the G.O.P. convention

Greeting Top Woman Red

JACOB MALIK, Russia's Ambassador to Britain, greeting MRS. EKATERINA FURTEVA as she arrived at London yesterday at the head of a delegation of 16 Soviet parliamentary deputies. together, and a week after Mr. Eisenhower was nominated, Moore was promoted to vice president of Trans-Caribbean.

Almost overnight, Moore blossomed out with his own business. He lent money, as a broker, to small airlines and trucking companies. What he does is borrow money from American Security and Trust, then lends the money to the small companies as an advance on payments they have coming from the Government. As his commission, he takes out 1.5 per cent.

Two airlines executives told this column they could get the same service for half Moore's commission, but they pay Moore extra for his political influence. Moore also arranges direct loans for small airlines through American Security and Trust, charging a middleman's profit.

How a man of Moore's 1952 income of $6500 could suddenly start doing a $1,000,000 business with American Security and Trust is a mystery. The bank's president, Daniel W. Bell, former Under Secretary of the Treasury, said he could not discuss a client's business.

Moore and his wife are frequent visitors at the White House. He sat with Mrs. Eisenhower and Mrs. Moore just behind the President as his brother-in-law gave his historic television statement to the nation that he would run again. Moore was on view before millions of people—including his airline and trucking clients.

There's nothing wrong with the business Moore conducts. He merely benefits from having friends in high places.

Canada to Build Atom Plant. OTTAWA, July 12 (AP)—A report to Parliament says work will begin in August on a $14-500,000 atomic energy demonstration power plant. The plant, generating 20,000 kilowatts, will be built near Des Moines, Que., 150 miles northeast of Ottawa.

SPY RECRUITING IS CHARGED. BERLIN, July 13 (AP)—Communist East Germany accused United States intelligence yesterday of trying to recruit young East Berliners as spies and saboteurs.

A Maj. Kehl of the East German Ministry for State Security told a news conference United States military intelligence in West Berlin had made, particularly in the last few days, "mass" attempts of this kind.

Pravda Says It Is Move by West Toward Setting Up 'Spy Nests.'

THE Soviet Union has flatly rejected President Eisenhower's latest proposal for an increased exchange of persons and ideas with the Iron Curtain countries.

The rebuff was announced yesterday by Pravda, the Communist party's newspaper, which described the President's suggestion that "information centers" be opened in Communist and Western capitals as a move towards "spy nests."

It criticized the President's advocacy of what Pravda calls "the notorious 'free movement of ideas.'" This means, the newspaper said, the "dissemination of American literature propagating capitalist practices, misanthropy, racism, war."

Mr. Eisenhower's program was made public June 29. It had the recommendation of the National Security Council and called for: gradual increase in exchanges of persons and information with the Soviet bloc.

Based on Geneva Proposal. The proposal followed the outlines of the 17-point program introduced by the United States, Britain and France at the Geneva Foreign Ministers Conference last October. It was rejected by the Soviet Union then and Pravda stated the Soviet attitude in stronger terms.

In the program the Western powers called for an end to censorship and radio jamming. They suggested a wide exchange of books, newspapers, magazines and films. They also noted that a reasonable rate of foreign exchange should be instituted to permit many private tourists could visit the Soviet Union.

Pravda indicated a Soviet interest in stepping up the exchange of technical delegations with the United States, but barring the flow from the West of ideas that are alien to Communist thoughts.

The newspaper accused American officials of erecting "with their own hands a real iron curtain on the United States borders."

Tito Said to Have Informed U.S. He Spurned Soviet Overtures

Reported to Have Resisted Pressure to Recognize East Reich, Balked at Word-ing of Final Communiqué.

By MARGUERITE HIGGINS

The New York Herald Tribune Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

SINCE his recent return home from Moscow, Marshal Josip (Tito) Broz of Yugoslavia has sent word through diplomatic channels to top United States officials insisting that he was able to forestall Soviet efforts to pull him into their camp, it has been learned here.

In his communications with United States officials, the Yugoslav President has also reaffirmed his determination to retain the status quo with the West, and particularly the United States, Administration sources state.

According to informed officials, this is the reason why Secretary of State John Foster Dulles is pleading with Congress to avoid hasty action in cutting Yugoslav aid, lest it eliminate alternatives and throw Tito into Russia's arms.

Armed by U.S. The Administration finds it especially significant that Marshal Tito has taken pains to make it clear that he wishes to avoid the necessity of obtaining military supplies in any major way from the Soviet Union. At present the majority of Yugoslavia's modern defense equipment has been provided by the United States.

Diplomats say that messages reaching here from Yugoslavia show that Tito depends on two main arguments in underscoring his country's independence from the Soviet bloc despite his recent friendly visit to Moscow.

Tito's first point is that he successfully resisted Soviet pressure for him to recognize Communist East Germany. Although himself a Communist state, Yugoslavia has maintained relations only with West Germany. It has scorned to recognize East Germany on the grounds that this rump state was a lackey of Moscow's, having no independent will of its own. But now that Moscow's "new look" promises greater independence to Communist movements everywhere, it had been feared in the West that Tito might consent to recognize the eastern zone.

The only concession made on Germany, the Yugoslavs contend, was to agree with Moscow's position that the question of German reunification should be left to negotiation between Currently at stake in Congress are the continuance of military aid to Tito and $30-000,000 for economic aid.

In discussing his visit to Moscow, Tito has insisted to United States officials that he was really the victor in that he persuaded the Soviet leadership to agree publicly that each Socialist country could find its own road to Socialism instead, as heretofore, of following precisely the Stalinist pattern.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Missiles, Yes; Schools, No

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I was disgusted and ashamed to be an American when I heard that federal aid for schools had been defeated.

When will the people and the Government of this country realize that the rise and fall of our nation is dictated by the attention given to our educational system?

All the money, missiles, or meetings in the world can't bring us the peace that we perpetually seek. Only through education in the homes, churches and mainly our schools can we achieve the understanding that we so badly need in order to live as one family under one roof.

I pray that we soon awake from our slumber and retrieve ourselves from the ranks of decaying civilizations.

Now Is the Time

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Among the 48 states, Missouri ranks forty-third in its care of the mentally ill. The Post-Dispatch has recently printed fine articles and pictures concerning the chronically ill hospital. These serve to inform and arouse the public to the conditions and needs of this hospital.

It would be a great public service if you would continue along the same lines with our state hospitals for the mentally ill. Why not publish, for comparison, the wonderful progress achieved by the Governors of Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Pennsylvania and California?

Now is the time for candidates to state their plans, if any, for the improvement of our five state hospitals and the development of preventive treatment. We need strong, understanding leadership.

This is the golden opportunity for the voters to take things in their own hands and see to it that our fine state comes out of the dark ages to be comparable with those states in the top 10 of these United States.

As mental health chairman of our club for the past three years I have followed all the articles dealing with the care of and lack of care of the mentally ill. I am encouraged by the increased number of articles dealing with various phases of our forgotten men and women.

You may be sure the women's clubs are working for the best possible care of those now in our hospitals and to prevent the need for the future mental patients ever becoming custodial patients.

Only a Watch Will Do

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The president of the Home Builders of Greater St. Louis wrote a letter to this column urging that parents keep their children away from half-completed buildings or dangerous excavations. This was prompted by the accident in Brooklyn last month, when five children were buried in a sand pile adjacent to a construction job.

This warning is all very well, but the fact is that the law, way back from Anglo-Saxon times, protects children, who are considered infants, from themselves, and makes the owner of the property and the contractor liable for such accidents. This is on the theory that such a site constitutes an "attractive nuisance," and lights and barricades are not considered enough. Only a 24-hour watch will do.

LOUIS NEWBERGER.

The State's Courtesy

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Last week I accompanied a friend to the State Automobile License Bureau on Grand boulevard. There were several scores of people waiting their turn on the main floor. There were several elderly people leaning on the rail, some sitting on the steps leading to the second floor. It is asking too much for the state to have a dozen chairs or a bench to sit on while waiting for a couple of hours?

Short of a Mass March

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

We are delighted to hear that the city is now able to cut weeds on neglected lots and bill the owner. My husband is one of the many who are miserable with the tears, sniffles and loss of pep suffered by his fever victims.

We live two lots east of a bumper crop of weeds, some over seven feet high. These weeds cover an area the width of a city block and over 50 feet wide. The patch lies just off Ridgewood between Chipewa and Beck (near Kingshighway).

Some years ago the city bought this property in order to put a street through. The plans have changed now and the weeds flourish, a hay fever stimulant in the summer and a fire hazard in the fall.

For three years in a row I've called the Park Department and, on referral by them, the Police Department, and as yet not one weed has fallen. What must we do to get results—round up the neighbors and march on City Hall?

The prevailing winds are already wafting the pollen in our direction and the hankies are piled high in the wash. I'm not much of an organizer of mass meetings and my patience has worn thin. I'm sharpening the sickle and preparing an assault. To which city department do I send the bill?

A. G. LEE.

Atom to the Fore

A lot is happening just now on the atomic energy front. The Senate has just passed, 49 to 40, the Gore bill for the construction of six public atomic power plants for peaceful uses. Coincidentally comes the news of the new plan of Soviet Russia for nuclear power development in Europe. Moscow has made another "new look" move by proposing that European nations, plus the United States, join in a new international agency for the control of atomic power for peaceful uses.

That the Eisenhower Administration needs to do more in this field than it is doing is made clear by the reaction of Japan to the atomic performance in the United States. Japanese Atom Chairman Matsuro Shoriki has talked with atomic delegations from both the United States and Britain. As a result he is convinced that the British are five years ahead of us in the development of the atom for peace.

So although he is in general a supporter of United States policies, he is looking to England for leadership in the development of atomic electric power. "The British maintain," he says, "that they will be producing electrical power at a feasible cost at Calder Hall," which the English put into operation May 22. "American experts have at least six similar projects in the works but they could not tell me when they would be able to match Calder Hall."

Adm. Lewis L. Strauss, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, presumably still believes the United States is in the lead in the development of the peaceful atom.

But it is plain that the Senate does not share the Strauss optimism. This became clear when the upper chamber put its approval on the forward-looking bill of Senator Gore of Tennessee. And it now becomes evident also that the Japanese do not believe Chairman Strauss's protestations of leadership.

What, after all, do these protestations mean if the AEC can neither show the Japanese a commercial-scale atomic power plant in operation nor give them any idea at what time one will be in operation?

If the Japanese turn elsewhere than to the United States for atomic leadership today, other countries which this nation hopes to lead into freedom through prosperity may do the same.

Americans may, of course, take a cousinly pride in the accomplishments of the British. If the men of Tokyo go to London rather than Washington for atomic leadership, all is not lost. Both countries are of the free world.

But the outstripping of both England and the United States by the Soviet Union would be a serious matter for the entire West, and it has become a serious matter to be contended with because of the United States' wordy inactivity thus far in putting the atom to the service of people in their homes and places of business.

The Senate serves the best interests not only of the country but of peace in the world by passing the Gore bill and sending it to the House. Speaker Rayburn and the House leaders, we trust, will see that it comes to a vote as soon as possible. Here is an opportunity too good to miss.

Bridge Tolls at Alton

The Alton City Council is making a mistake in refusing to abolish tolls on the Clark bridge over the Mississippi river. The tolls should be abolished for the simple and adequate reason that Alton has no right to collect them.

It may take some time for the State of Missouri, which now owns the bridge, to establish this point in the United States Supreme Court. But can anyone seriously doubt that the point will be established?

The City of Alton has never owned the Clark bridge and does not own it now. St. Charles county bought it in 1936, on the promise that tolls would be abolished when the purchase debt was paid off. The debt now having been paid, St. Charles county kept its promise by turning over the bridge to the State of Missouri, which is under contract to make it free.

Under these circumstances, it is as preposterous for the City of Alton to step in and start collecting tolls on the Illinois side as it would be for a private individual to set himself up in the robber baron business on the Missouri side. Since the courts will surely recognize the equity of the situation when they get around to considering the case, the City of Alton would save itself a lot of ill will among users of the bridge by recognizing it now.

Unquestionably Alton and the State of Illinois face serious problems in handling traffic on the approaches to the bridge. Probably a second span is needed, so that one-way traffic could be instituted across the river. But to make these problems the pretext for imposing an unfair toll which nobody has a right to collect is no way to handle the situation. Let the bridge become free, as it was promised to be 20 years ago. Then let Alton and both states join hands to solve the problems of approach.

A Pension Inequity About to Go

One of the best examples of the evils of a lobby is brought to light in the military survivors benefit bill which has just emerged from Senate House conference. Due to the efforts of the Reserve Officers Association, a distinction had been created between reserve and career military officers whereby the widow of a reservist killed on active duty received several times more pension than a widow of a career officer.

The United States Naval Institute Proceedings last December gave this example of the inequity: "The widow of a Regular major general or rear admiral who has no dependent children, receives only $87 per month, while the widow of a Reserve major general or rear admiral may receive $525 per month."

There should be no objection to reserve and regular officers being put on a par in this respect and the measure deserves all support necessary to make it a law.

Delays and Delays

The Justice Department's procrastination in the tax scandal inquiry has caused the federal grand jury to take the matter into its own hands. Jurors will go back to work next Wednesday at their own request. Certainly Washington did not request them to do anything.

This is the third time that the jurors have expressed resentment over the "dilatory tactics" of officials handling the inquiry. In April Attorney General Brownell suggested that they recess in order not to influence the trials of T. Lamar Caudie and Matthew J. Connelly. But when these former officials were convicted, the jury still was given nothing to do.

Next the jurors complained to Mr. Brownell. He did not commit himself, but the jurors later were told they would be recalled July 19. This is only four days before their term ends. So the jury now plans to meet on July 18, which at least saves one day for work. It is the best they can do because the law requires a week's notice to the jurors. The public as well as the jurors can easily note that the Justice Department has shown little interest in the grand jury since it won the indictment of two former Truman Administration officials. And in an election year, that is a sour finale for a major investigation.

Strange Case of Public Housing

The odd thing about President Eisenhower's request for passage of the housing bill is that his own housing administrator, former Kansas Congressman Cole, is fighting House approval of the bill already passed by the Senate.

The Senate was generous with the President's public housing program. Whereas the President requested only 35,000 low-rent units a year, the Senate passed a bill authorizing him to build between 50,000 and 200,000 a year.

If the Administration is serious about public housing, it ought to welcome the Senate bill. But when the measure came up in the House Rules Committee, the President's own appointee, Housing Administrator Cole, urged the members to refuse clearance for it. The Senate bill, he said, authorizes more public housing than local communities are prepared to absorb.

The reasoning has a hollow ring. If local authorities were actually unable to absorb all the housing approved by Congress, they just would not absorb it. The federal program, in other words, would be automatically cut back by local non-participation.

So Administrator Cole's stand is a mystery. Year after year, the House votes against public housing and the Senate for it. Then a conference committee gets together and "splits the difference." The best way to get the House to accept 35,000 units a year, therefore, is to present that body with a Senate bill providing more than 35,000, so that the compromise will be somewhere near the desired level.

Mr. Cole, in short, is pursuing the course best calculated to kill or reduce his own program?

Why? The only clue is that last year the White House actually threatened to veto the public housing bill after the conference committee approved 45,000 units instead of the recommended 35,000. As we said then, this seemed to be the behavior of an Administration which sponsors enough public housing to keep urban liberals from complaining, but not so much as to alienate the real estate lobby.

Cold Shoulder Returned

There was one Senator's stand on the Bridges amendment to the mutual security bill which ought to interest President Eisenhower particularly. That was the announcement of Senator Wiley of Wisconsin that he favored the amendment to cut off foreign aid to Yugoslavia.

A year ago Senator Wiley unquestionably would have stood with President Eisenhower in opposition to the Bridges amendment. He undoubtedly would have voted to give the Administration room in which to operate in foreign affairs. He would have cast a vote of confidence in the White House. As a matter of fact, the Wisconsin Senator doubtless would have done so only a few weeks ago.

But now Alexander Wiley is in a hard race for renomination against a McCarthyite and no one around the White House will say a single good word for the veteran Eisenhower supporter by way of minimum thanks and appreciation.

Senator Wiley would be only human if he decided to give the White House a little of its own cold shoulder treatment.

The Shakespeare of Painting

The great display of Rembrandt's paintings and etchings in Holland this summer, marking the artist's three hundred and fiftieth anniversary, makes it hard to resist one of those $50-down flights to Europe. After all, Rembrandt is to pictorial art what Beethoven is to music, and what Shakespeare is to literature.

Even though he generally painted in subdued colors—which makes his mastery of light all the more wonderful—familiarity with his works dims them no more than repetition diminishes the "Ereica" or "Hamlet." The man's insight, his quest for truth rather than mere beauty, gave importance to what might have been the most routine portrait. It also served that uncompromising honesty and independence, at once the secret of his artistic success and his ultimate financial failure.

Following his liberation from Spain, Holland respected the work of the gypsy Rembrandt. But as the nation grew rich, clients demanded flattery rather than a revelation of strength and weakness. So Rembrandt was no longer their man. But what portraitist ever approached "The Night Watch" or "The Syndics"?

Calvinist Holland turned its back on the religious painting of the Renaissance, but Rembrandt was deeply devoted to the Bible, and more than anything else it supplied him with subjects. Here again there was honest admission of man's limited grasp of the truth. Foregrounds might be filled with painstakingly painted details, but always there were backgrounds of dark mystery.

Since $50-down Atlantic crossings are not possible for all of us, it would be magnificent if the Dutch Government could arrange to send the Rembrandt show on an international tour.

Is the White House on the Alert?

Quite often the White House seems to be taken by surprise by something that happens in Congress. So it is in order to sound a warning that one of these days the Administration may find a Senate vote in process on the Dirksen version of the Bricker amendment. This is the proposed change in the Constitution that would limit, no one knows how much, the legal authority of the President to conduct the foreign affairs of the nation.

The current version, sponsored by the Republican Senator from Illinois who seeks reelection this year, was reported favorably, 7 to 2, by the Senate Judiciary Committee, March 27. That was nearly four months ago and the notice is adequate enough for the White House to be amply forewarned. Yet there is little indication that anything is being done to line up Republican votes to defeat it if it comes up.

On the contrary, Senator Ives of New York, one of the few Republicans who voted against the Bricker proposal in the last Congress, has said that he is "inclined" to vote for the Dirksen version "unless President Eisenhower strongly objects to it." Since the earlier version was defeated by only one vote—that of the late Democratic Senator Kilgore of West Virginia—somebody around the White House ought to be holding the line and indeed strengthening it.

If the Eisenhower Administration weakens on this issue it will be a case of caving in under election year pressure, nothing less. The Bricker-Dirksen amendment is either bad or it is unnecessary. If it is the latter there is no excuse whatever in setting the long and involved amending process in motion simply to appease Bricker & Co. in the Senate and the Old Guard wing of the American Bar Association.

"SITUATION UNCHANGED"

—From The Washington Post.

St. Louis Snaps Out of It

New community spirit credited by magazine with moving city from decay to progress; election of charter freeholders seen as latest in string of major gains for Civic Progress, Inc., and Mayor Tucker; Louisville, Newark and Honolulu study our methods.

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Robert E. Cantwell in Fortune

Early in May of this year an odd election took place in St. Louis. It was called to elect a board of freeholders to consider revision of the city's antiquated charter. Aligned on one side were both the Democratic and Republican machines, and organized labor.

Pitted against this formidable alliance were St. Louis's Mayor Raymond Tucker, the city's two newspapers, the Post-Dispatch and the Globe-Democrat, and a curious organization of business men known as Civic Progress, Inc.

The Mayor's group won the election, and credit for the victory belongs, in substantial part, to Civic Progress.

Civic Progress is a remarkably small organization. It has only two executive members. Some, like Edgar Quency of Monsanto Chemical and August Busch, head large, national companies, but more than half of the members are owners and executives of firms operating only in the area.

How Civic Progress Began

All that the members of Civic Progress have in common is that they are important citizens of St. Louis—probably the leading citizens. They include six manufacturers, five bankers, two department-store executives, two utility presidents, an insurance-company president, a real-estate manager, a former judge, two Chamber of Commerce executives and the chancellor of Washington University.

In the group there are both Democrats and Republicans, university graduates and night-school graduates, Catholics, Jews, and Protestants. Their average age is fifty-seven. And as a group they comprise a potent force for civic betterment in St. Louis.

The first meeting of Civic Progress was held in the office of the Mayor of St. Louis on Thursday, Sept. 10, 1953. Mayor Tucker, an independent Democrat elected on an anti-machine ticket in 1953, had called in the city's leading bankers and industrialists to ask their help in dealing with a truly alarming civic crisis: the imminent threat of municipal bankruptcy. For years these same business men had despaired of unshrinking the city's tangled affairs, but now they were impelled by the gravity of the situation—and their own substantial stake in mortgage values, municipal services, and the future of downtown St. Louis—to band together to attempt a rescue operation.

St. Louis needed long-term financing for basic improvements, but there was no possibility of floating a bond issue when the city could not even meet its current expenses. With factory payrolls at an all-time high, with the lowest per capita debt of any large city, St. Louis was nevertheless almost paralyzed.

What the City Faced

Though its budget in fiscal 1953 was only $45,000,000, St. Louis had a $4,000,000 cumulative deficit at the end of that year and was facing the very real danger of a general financial breakdown. And this financial crisis was only part of a deeper civic malaise.

Once the third-largest city in the United States in 1920, St. Louis had slipped to eighth place.

No new privately financed office building had been erected in the downtown area since 1929.

Of St. Louis's sixty-one square miles of area, 52 per cent, including 134,000 dwelling units, was either blighted or slum area.

Daytime pedestrian traffic in the shopping area had dropped more than 40 per cent since 1929.

With 1500 miles of streets, St. Louis spent less for street upkeep in 1953 than Toledo, O. (850 miles of streets), and less for street improvement than Sacramento, Calif. (440 miles).

Business was leaving the city, and property values seemed to be headed for a serious decline.

A French business man, visiting Chairman Edgar Quency at Monsanto Chemical's St. Louis headquarters, looked over the crumbling downtown area and remarked, "It looks like a European city bombed in the war."

St. Louis Makes a Comeback

But since 1953—since the first meeting of Civic Progress—St. Louis has come a long way.

St. Louis has balanced its budget and the city finances have been put in order.

The flight of business from the city has been halted.

The first step has been taken toward the adoption of a new, improved city charter.

Some $20,000,000 of new bond-issue money is being spent on street, bridge, and viaduct improvements.

Some $90,000,000 of municipal, state, and federal money is being spent to build three six-lane high-speed expressways fanning out from the congested downtown area.

About $18,000,000 of municipal money is being spent on hospitals, parks, and playgrounds.

Some $20,000,000 of city and federal money is being spent for slum clearance. The cleared land will provide sites for an estimated 3350,000 of private building projects.

No one claims that Civic Progress is exclusively responsible for all the changes that have occurred. The business men have, for instance, received invaluable leadership from Mayor Tucker. But Tucker himself says that Civic Progress has been "the driving force behind every major civic improvement since its organization. No Mayor of St. Louis has ever received the help I've had."

Mayor Tucker's Rare Leadership

Every member of Civic Progress, regardless of his own political affiliation, has come out of Civic Progress's campaigns with a profound appreciation of Democratic Mayor Tucker. They say that what they have accomplished has been enormously facilitated by his help.

A Mayor of the old political-machine type would have made all of Civic Progress's efforts difficult—"not impossible, perhaps, but almost."

The success of Civic Progress has naturally aroused the interest of civic groups in other cities. In fact, Civic Progress is being studied by such widely separated communities as Louisville, Ky., Newark, N.J., and Honolulu.

There is nothing, certainly, in the organization form of Civic Progress to prevent its being transplanted elsewhere, and its flexibility and effectiveness make it a powerful instrument for civic betterment. Every city has its worthy works that need only a little more support, a little more financing to complete them. Civic Progress or some organization like it can provide the needed catalyst. The only prerequisite is something akin to the new civic spirit that has moved St. Louis from decay to progress.

Shaky Evidence

WAS JUSTICE DONE? by Malcolm P. Sharp. (Monthly Review Press, 214 pgs., $3.50.)

This book is an analysis of the complicated record of the Rosenberg case. The author is a law professor at the University of Chicago, and is also president of the National Lawyers Guild. He participated, as an attorney, in the final stages of the case, because by that time, he says, a study of the record had convinced him that the conviction was based, at the very least, on shaky grounds.

Prof. Sharp's main point is that the conviction of the Rosenbergs was caused by the testimony of unreliable witnesses. These witnesses were the Rosenbergs' alleged accomplices, who, according to Mr. Sharp, presumably escaped prosecution or got off with comparatively light sentences in return for implicating them.

The chief supporting evidence was a certain hollowed-out table which the Rosenbergs were supposed to use for secret micro-filming; it never materialized, at the trial, beyond a photograph, and the author contends that the sinister nature of a cheap table which the Rosenbergs did own was a fabrication of the prosecution's witnesses.

For some time this book will raise disturbing doubts as to validity of our system of criminal justice. The adversary method requires great fairness and restraint, but sometimes a prosecutor will press his advantage to the obfuscation of the jury.

Mr. Sharp implies that prosecutors Irving Saypol and Roy Cohn did so in this case. For others the execution of the Rosenbergs raises, anew, questions about the common sense of capital punishment.

If later evidence, or even cool study of the record, raises doubts unfelt by the jury at the tense trial, this can be no help now to people already executed. The record raises doubts, as a matter of fact, in respectable quarters.

L'Osservatore Romano pleaded, ineffectually, for clemency.

Now for Mr. Sharp's book a foreword has been written by Harold Urey, an eminent nuclear scientist. Dr. Urey eloquently presents his firm belief that both the Rosenbergs and their alleged fellow-spies who are now in prison, Morton Sobell, were victims of injustice.

However, the possible validity of this belief could not safely be assessed by any reader, including the present reviewer, without first undertaking the long and dreary task of examining thousands of pages of the record, as well as alleged new evidence produced after the trial. Mr. Sharp performed this task, but inevitably he writes as an advocate rather than as a wholly impartial analyst.

What's What in Records

RECORD RATINGS, compiled by Kurt Meyer, edited by Richard S. Hill. (Crown, $5.95.)

If any proof were needed of the stature the record industry has now attained, this large, impressive tome supplies it. In its 440 oversize, triple-column pages may be found all the information anyone could desire about serious records, extending all the way back into the primitive era of 78s. It is a fantastic feat of compilation and comparison, taking in every make of record and cross-indexing same in several different ways. The standards of comparison are not those of the gentlemen named on the title page, but of 28 leading magazines, some in Europe.

Thus you can see at a glance that recordings are available of a particular work, or artist, and the way they have been rated by the various journals. In recent years many record guides of one sort or another have been published, but if any book can claim to be the record-collector's bible, this is it.

WALTER LIPPMANN

The Question of Health

WASHINGTON. THE DECISION, which the President made known to the congressional leaders on Tuesday, was taken, it would appear, immediately after his operation—as soon as his doctors were satisfied that the operation had been successful and that they could expect a good and reasonably rapid recovery.

The decision taken then was to consider that this second illness was accidental and incidental. It was not only unrelated to the heart attack. Not only had it no negative bearing on his general fitness.

It was even likely to make him more fit by correcting a chronic ailment. This was the picture given to the country at the press conference held by Mr. Hagerly and the doctors a few days after the operation. It was followed by a pause of a few weeks while the good recovery the doctors prophesied was being confirmed.

Already an Issue.

On Tuesday, feeling much recovered, the President told the congressional leaders that he had not had to make a new decision about running again. He faced the issue last winter after his first illness, which did really raise the question of his fitness.

He had not had to face the issue again because his illness and his operation, now that he was feeling himself again, did not affect his general health.

The President will have no illusion about whether his health is going to be an issue in the coming campaign. There may be all sorts of views as to whether, and to how, the Democrats can legitimately raise the issue.

No Conspiracy of Silence.

But it is the kind of issue which is already in people's minds. It will be talked about privately, whatever the politicians say publicly. It is in the nature of things the paramount issue.

Who is in fact likely to exercise the powers of the presidency during the next four years—the President in the full vigor of his capacity, the President having to spare himself and to depend on his staff, or the Vice President?

The discussion of these things is a horrid duty. But it is a duty imposed upon public men and upon the press by the President's decision to seek another term, despite his age and his serious illnesses.

To refrain from the discussion, not to try to inform the discussion and to lead it and to enlighten it, would be to engage in a sentimental conspiracy of silence.

It would be to attempt to

conduct a momentous national election without talking about the main issue which is in everybody's mind. The result would be to make the election turn on a vast whispering campaign.

A Test of Taste.

The discussion will be a difficult test of our taste and of our common sense. No doubt, the medical profession will be heard from, not so much in public pronouncements as in private by doctors talking to their patients and their friends.

But there can be, it is evident, no such thing as an authoritative and conclusive medical opinion. For the question before the American people is whether Gen. Eisenhower can be counted upon to carry a burden of stress and strain which cannot now be predicted and appraised.

By Common Sense.

For nobody has a right to count upon four long years in which the President is under as little stress and strain as has been Gen. Eisenhower since his first illness last September.

The people will have to judge the question of health by the common sense they have acquired by experience—experience from having known about the older generation in their own family and among their friends.

They will be asking themselves and they will be asking each other whether it is prudent to re-elect him, given the President's age and his medical history and the modest reserves of energy which, even before his illnesses, compelled him to work short hours. There will, of course, be a great division of opinion on whether it is prudent to re-elect him, the Republicans rating the risk as reasonably small, the Democrats as very much larger.

Much will almost certainly depend on whether, once his convalescence is concluded, the President displays a convincing vigor in the conduct of his office.

CHARLOTT E. CARR DIES

NEW YORK, July 13 (AP)—Miss Charlotte E. Carr, consultant to New York City Welfare Commissioner Henry L. McCarthy, was found dead yesterday in her Manhattan residence. She was 66 years old.

Miss Carr served as deputy secretary of Labor and Industry for the state of Pennsylvania from 1930 to 1933, and in 1934 was named Secretary of Labor and Industry. She was director of Chicago's Hull House from 1937 until 1943.

OPERA BACKSTAGE TOUR BY 500 MONDAY

Railway Men's Club Members and Wives First Group Under New Plan.

Municipal Opera's first backstage group tour will be made Monday night by 500 members of the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway men's club and their wives, who afterwards will attend the opening performance of "The Chocolate Soldier."

A picnic box supper will be served the Frisco men and their wives at 6:30 o'clock on the covered rehearsal stage on the theater's east side.

Members of the party will then divide into three groups for tours of the stage property rooms, scenery studios, wardrobe collections, stage areas and dressing rooms of stars and chorus members.

Arrangements for tours under the new plan have been made by Monsanto Chemical Co. for July 25; Frisco railway women's club, July 30; St. Louis Independent Packing Co., also July 30; International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Aug. 1; Missouri Pacific Railroad, Aug. 1; Missouri Pacific Railroad, Aug. 1; Collinsville by train, Aug. 20, and Wabash Railroad, also Aug. 20.

The backstage tour plan, announced a week ago, provides that any group of 100 or more club members or company employees may attend the open air theater in a body at reduced rates Sunday, Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday and will be conducted on a tour of backstage operations just before the performance.

Also available to groups making the tours are the special picnic box suppers.

Inquiries about the plan are to be directed to Municipal Theatre Association, 1876 Arcade building, St. Louis 1, Mo. The telephone number is CE 1-2323.

FUNERAL TO BE TOMORROW FOR LEONARD A. STEGER

Funeral services for Leonard A. Steger, superintendent of Webster Groves public schools, will be at 10 a.m. tomorrow at Webster Groves Presbyterian Church, 55 West Lockwood avenue, with burial in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Steger, 52 years old, died yesterday after suffering a heart attack at his home, 324 Helfenstein avenue, Webster Groves. Last April he was named "Webster Groves Man of the Year" by the community's Chamber of Commerce.

Surviving are his wife; a daughter, Mrs. Robert Hansen, and a sister, Miss Pamela Steger.

SHAH OF IRAN RETURNS FROM HIS VISIT TO RUSSIA

TEHRAN, July 13 (UP)—Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and Queen Soraya returned today from their 18-day visit to the Soviet Union.

The Shah said in an airport speech he hoped the journey would "prove fruitful and strengthen good relations" between Iran and Russia.

The Shah left Moscow yesterday after talks with Soviet leaders. A communique that usually follows such visits was not issued, indicating that concrete agreements apparently were not reached.

Shrine Honors Harry J. Kiener.

Harry J. Kiener, 911 South Skinner boulevard, a member of Moolah Temple for 46 years, was named an emeritus life member of the Shrine yesterday in Detroit, at the annual Shrine convention. Requisite for the honor was to serve for 18 years as a representative to the Imperial Council session of the Shrine of North America.

MOTHER WHO HAD TRIPLETS IS REPORTED DOING WELL

Mrs. Spencer White was reported doing well today at St. Mary's Infirmary after giving birth to triplets on Tuesday. Mrs. White and her husband, Negroes, have five other children, all of whom were born singly.

The triplets arrived within less than an hour. Two girls came first and then a boy. Weights were 3 pounds, 11 ounces; 4 pounds, 6 ounces, and 4 pounds, 13 ounces.

The family lives at the John Robinson Homes, East St. Louis. White is a steelworker but has been unemployed for two years.

EDWARD A. FRESN FUNERAL SUNDAY IN EDWARDSVILLE

Funeral services for Edward A. Fresen, former president of Edwardsville National Bank and Trust Co., will be at 2 p.m. Sunday at Eden Evangelical and Reformed Church, Edwardsville. Burial will be in Valley View Cemetery there.

Mr. Fresen, 71 years old, died after a long illness yesterday at his home, Edwardsville. He had been in the banking business for 40 years, and was honorary chairman of the board of directors of the Edwardsville bank. He retired three years ago.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Marie Fresen; a son, the Rev. Edward Fresen; a daughter, Mrs. Robert Jaeger; and a sister Miss Carrie Fresen.

BOOKS PUT ON CHURCH INDEX

VATICAN CITY, July 13 (AP)—The Vatican placed two of the most popular works of Simone de Beauvoir, the controversial French feminist author and existentialist, on the forbidden index yesterday.

One was "The Second Sex," a feminist plea for the rights of women which appeared in 1949. The other was "The Mandarins," published in 1954, an exhaustive study of postwar French intellectualism with a piquant section detailing a romance with a famous American novelist in Chicago.

Seeking International Beauty Crown

LACK OF FUNDS IS BLAMED FOR TV REGULATION WOES

WASHINGTON, July 13 (AP)—George C. McConaughy, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, told congressional investigators yesterday one reason why FCC has not solved more television regulation problems is that Congress has not provided the money.

McConaughy, appearing before the House anti-trust subcommittee, was being questioned about "option time," provisions in contracts between networks and stations under which the station agrees to accept programs provided by the network in some of the prime viewing hours. FCC rules forbid the use of option time to outbid the programs of another network, but allow it to be used to outbid local programs.

McConaughy was asked why FCC, which criticized radio option time in 1941 had waited so long without changing its rules and why it appeared more concerned with protecting network than local programs. McConaughy replied that lack of money had delayed the necessary over-all study until recently.

JOHN C. MEYERS NAMED UNITED FUND BUDGET HEAD

John C. Meyers, former general auditor for Union Electric Co., has been named director of the budget department of the United Fund of Greater St. Louis. It was announced today.

Meyers, member of the faculty of the evening division of the St. Louis University School of Commerce and Finance, will work with the 114 United Fund agencies and a volunteer citizen budget committee in determining the agencies' needs and allocation of the contributed funds to meet them. He had been employed by Union Electric Co. for 14 years.

A graduate of St. Louis University in 1937, he served as a volunteer in the university's endowment drive and worked in three Communist Chest campaigns. He is a past president of the St. Louis chapter of the Institute of Internal Auditors.

POPE BESECHES RED BLOC CHURCH TO BE STEADFAST

VATICAN CITY, July 13 (UP)—Pope Pius XII has appealed to Catholics behind the Iron Curtain to hold fast against Communist persecutors to avoid a "calamity" for the Christian world, the Vatican disclosed today.

The Pope, made his appeal in an apostolic letter dated June 29, the feast day of St. Peter and Paul. It was addressed to three cardinals jailed by Communist regimes and to the bishops, clergy and laymen of Albania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Poland, Romania, East Germany and "other peoples of Europe suffering persecution."

The letter praised the courage of church leaders and the faithful who have suffered from Communist persecution. It said, "In this spiritual struggle, if each and every one shows strength and loyalty in the fight—as we trust they will—they may be glorious victims but never conquered."

TETUAN, Spanish Morocco, July 13 (AP)—Spain turned over all schools and other educational and cultural institutions in its protectorate to the Sultan's Moroccan government yesterday. This brought to six the number of governmental departments the Spanish have turned over.

POPE LEAVES VATICAN CITY

VATICAN CITY, July 13 (AP)—Pope Pius XII will leave the sweltering heat of Vatican City tomorrow for his summer palace at Castelgondolfo, in the Alban hills near Rome.

Normally he makes his summer shift at the end of July. His doctors have been urging him for six weeks to go early this year. In a physical examination last May 30, the Pope was found generally fit but tired from overwork.

SENATOR GREEN HEADS JOINT INAUGURATION COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON, July 13 (AP)—Senator Theodore F. Green (Dem., Rhode Island), the Senate's oldest member, last night was elected chairman of the Senate-Joint committee to plan for the inauguration of the President in January next year.

Green announced that he would resign in favor of a Republican on the joint committee if a Republican were elected President in November.

The committee authorized the architect of the Capitol to let a contract for erection of the usual inaugural stands on the plaza east of the Capitol.

RETURNING RABBIS ASSERT JUDAISM IS DYING IN RUSSIA

NEW YORK, July 13 (AP)—Russian Jews, despite heroic efforts to preserve their faith, are "waging a losing battle against Communism's fundamental hostility to religion," three American Rabbis said on their return from the Soviet Union.

A joint statement they issued on their arrival home yesterday said their experiences in the U.S.S.R. led them to "the melancholy conclusion that Judaism in Russia is seriously threatened with extinction."

The statement added: "We were shocked to find that the major institutions of the Jewish religion and the vehicles of expression of Jewish culture had all but vanished, leaving a Judaism that is anemic and moribund."

The three, Rabbi Emanuel Rackman, of New York, who is president of the New York Board of Rabbis; Rabbi David I. Golovensky, of New Rochelle, N. Y., and Rabbi Dr. Morris N. Kertzer, of Rockville Centre, N. Y., spent two weeks in Russia.

"We must take this problem step by step," Bishop Clair said. "Our goal is integration, which means that a man is accepted as an American, with all the rights of an American, regardless of his race. And he must be able to live where he can afford to live and where he wants to live. We have a long way to go."

Negroes are ready for integration now, but low income, social customs and segregated housing are in the way, the conference was told by the Rev. J. Parrish Bell of Anderson, Ind., a former St. Louis pastor.

"The angles of this problem of race integration are economic and social," he said. "Integration in the churches is a two-way street," the Rev. T. L. Tinsley of Akron, O., said. "We are waiting for some white Methodists to join our churches. Our people may be absorbed in mixed churches without integration."

The Negro pastors discussed the change in the Methodist Church constitution approved by the General Conference of the church held in May at Minneapolis, Minn., making it easier for Negro churches to leave their segregated Central Jurisdiction and join a white group. Several pastors said they would not want to join a white conference unless they were fully accepted for the itinerant ministry, with right of appointment to any church.

ROBERT L. CARLETON DIES, WAS COMPOSER OF 'JADA'

BURBANK, Calif., July 13 (AP)—Robert L. (Bob) Carleton, composer of the Dixieland jazz classic, "Jada," died last night following an exploratory operation. He was 60 years old.

Carleton turned out more than 500 tunes during his career that began in his native St. Louis during World War I. He went to Hollywood in 1932. Carleton had been playing the piano recently in a local night club.

Survivors include his widow, Mary Louise; two daughters, Jaleta, 16, and Judy, 13, and a son, Robert, 11, all of North Hollywood.

100 NEGRO PASTORS DISCUSS INTEGRATION

Agree Racially Segregated Churches Will Continue for Some Time.

Negro Methodist pastors think racially segregated congregations will continue for some time, about 100 Negro pastors from 15 states agreed today in a discussion of race integration at Union Memorial Methodist Church, Pine boulevard and Leffingwell avenue.

"We can't have integrated churches and segregated housing at the same time," Bishop Matthew W. Clair Jr. of St. Louis declared. He presides over Negro Methodist churches in 15 states, and presided at today's meeting.

"We are not going to have integration until people live together," he said.

"We must take this problem step by step," Bishop Clair said. "Our goal is integration, which means that a man is accepted as an American, with all the rights of an American, regardless of his race. And he must be able to live where he can afford to live and where he wants to live. We have a long way to go."

Negroes are ready for integration now, but low income, social customs and segregated housing are in the way, the conference was told by the Rev. J. Parrish Bell of Anderson, Ind., a former St. Louis pastor.

"The angles of this problem of race integration are economic and social," he said. "Integration in the churches is a two-way street," the Rev. T. L. Tinsley of Akron, O., said. "We are waiting for some white Methodists to join our churches. Our people may be absorbed in mixed churches without integration."

The Negro pastors discussed the change in the Methodist Church constitution approved by the General Conference of the church held in May at Minneapolis, Minn., making it easier for Negro churches to leave their segregated Central Jurisdiction and join a white group. Several pastors said they would not want to join a white conference unless they were fully accepted for the itinerant ministry, with right of appointment to any church.

But it is the kind of issue which is already in people's minds. It will be talked about privately, whatever the politicians say publicly. It is in the nature of things the paramount issue.

Cards Defeat Gomez But Drop to Fifth as Pirates Capture Two

By Jack Rice

The ups and downs of the Cardinals have been simple to follow this season. First they went up, and then they went down, and today they are at that checkpoint known as half-way through the season. All they must do is decide which way they go next, and to date they haven't gone very far since last year.

Major league baseball teams play 154 games, barring pennant playoffs, which right now may be regarded as an unforeseen circumstance. The Cardinals played their seventy-seventh game last night at Busch Stadium, and it was a 5-to-3 victory over the Giants. But Pittsburgh won a double-header from Chicago, took over fourth place and dropped the Redbirds into fifth place and second division.

The 1956 Cardinals now are two games and about 15 trades ahead of the 1955 Cardinals, and you know what happened to the 1955 Cardinals. They were voted the "best seventh place team in the history of baseball," a compliment that Frank Lane kept repeating to himself every time he swapped off another half-dozen of them.

At this stage of the schedule last year the Cardinals had won 36 games and had lost 41, and now they have won 38 and have lost 39. If that seems to be modest progress, then the rest of the league has been standing around with them.

The secret is, of course, that nobody has been allowed to imitate Brooklyn of 1955, not even Brooklyn. After 77 games last year the Cardinals were 19 games out of first place.

They now are 12 games better off on that count, anyway, just seven games out of first place. They may consider the present company at Busch Stadium and remember a recent miracle accomplished by the Giants under their former patron saint, Leo Durocher. All growing boys need a goal, lest they take to shooting pool when they see they are going to be late getting home, anyhow.

Dark Starts With Bank The Cardinals had lost four successive games before they met the Giants as the beginner on a home stand. They started in strong and familiar fashion. Stan Musial hit a home run in the first inning. Al Dark had gone before him, with a double. It looked as if it would be a night to do things the easy way, for the Cardinal starter was Tom Poholsky. He had been growing on the Cardinals as a steady influence, the man most likely to succeed after a string of failures by others.

It did not work that way at all, because Hank Thompson hit a home run after Willie Mays singled in the second inning. Musial singled home Don Blasingame in the third for a 3-2 Cardinal lead, and there was one thing about that one-run lead. When it went, it was a sight to see.

Mays led off the fourth inning with a home run that made an unconstructed American League in the press box bless all light standards. A light standard was all that saved the memory of Mickey Mantle's home run over the left field wall and out of the park.

Mantle hit his into trees or onto a roof of a house across the street from the left field wall. The trees and the roof wouldn't talk, and people who Mays hit was above the scoreboard, and a headed for Fairground Park until the ironwork stopped it. Poholsky said, "It was going north-to-Wisconsin, I guess."

Liddle Is the Winner. Poholsky retired the next man, but went quickly after Thompson hit an arching single, and Daryl Spencer walked. Don Liddle, the recent Giant, relieved Poholsky and then the Cardinals patched together two runs in the seventh inning became a winner. Hal Smith singled into center after one man was out in the seventh and Giants starter Ruben Gomez walked Grady Hatton, at bat for Liddle.

Don Blasingame popped a single into center, and the bases were loaded. Out of respect to Mays' arm, nobody budged for home. Dark, doing nicely for anyone keeping tab on how men the Giants traded for Red Schoendienst were doing against them, scored Smith with a sacrifice fly.

Larry Jackson held the Giants hitless the final two innings. The Cardinals won Game No. 77 last year, too, and Jackson pitched the final inning, keeping the opposition scoreless. It was a place to let the comparisons die.

Red Schoendienst was one-for-three, and the former Cardinal star looked himself at second base. Once over the idea that he was out of uniform in the Giants' traveling grays, there was sufficient proof he was indeed, Schoendienst.

Triple for Repulski. The home stand began with a paid attendance of 14,448. Among final sights was Rip Repulski tripling in the eighth, and then becoming an easy out, as with rookie Hal Smith at bat, Rip tried to steal home and was retired in a grand confusion of signals.

More than 500 junior members of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Association of St. Louis and St. Louis County will attend the game tomorrow as guests of the Cardinals.

Jackie Price will put on his show next Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock, a half-hour before game-time. He is the baseball specialist who does such things as catch fly balls while driving a jeep. —J.R.

Rough Way to Treat an Old Friend

Ex-teammates HAL SMITH (sliding) and BILL SARNI spread each other over the Busch Stadium landscape as Smith scores for the Cardinals in the seventh inning. Sarni, the Giants' catcher, is covering the plate, taking a throw from Don Mueller. The Cardinals won, 5-3.

Dickson, Mizell and Schmidt Next in Cards' Rotation Plan

Murry Dickson will start tonight for the Cardinals against the Giants at Busch Stadium. Dickson and his knuckleball and his 6-and-7 record and his crafty determination represent the beginning of well-laid pitching plans.

Vinegar Bend Mizell will pitch Saturday against the Giants, said Manager Fred Hutchinson, and Sunday Willard Schmidt will start a game of a double-header against the Phils here, and the bonus youth, Lindy McDaniel, may come in from his constant efforts in the bullpen for a start he has earned.

Then, said Hutchinson, Tom Poholsky will get to try again. Long before that, Poholsky will have had an interview with Pitching Coach Bill Posedel. "I must be doing something wrong but I can't figure out what it is," Poholsky said.

Mays' Homer Prodigious. Willie Mays' home run against Poholsky was one of the hardest-hit balls Cardinal players could recall seeing. "He hit it off the handle," said Poholsky, dead-pan. Willard Schmidt looked at Poholsky, grinned and said, "That's the first light tower I ever saw with handles."

Hutchinson searched his memory, but not far because he seemed sure of the results, and said it was about the longest he ever had seen. The ball went over the bleachers twice, once going, and once coming back on the rebound from the tower it hit.

This long drive came as Willie made his mid-season change in weights—from a 34-ounce bat to a 33 and one-half ounce bat. He defends this as a reasonable half-courtesy of prevention. "It may not seem like much to bigger guys, but it seems a lot lighter to me about this time of the year."

Dark and Blasingame figured in two snappy double plays which drew sighs of relief from Redbird followers. With three Giants on base in the fourth, Pitcher Gomez lined to Dark who under-handed toss double Daryl Spencer off second for the inning-ending out. In the seventh, with the score tied, 3-3, and the Giants having another bases-loaded situation, the side was retired, Blasingame to Dark to Musial, which kept the roof from falling in on Don Liddle.

Musial's three runs-batted-in tied him with team-mate Ken Boyer for the league lead. Each has 61. Musial was ahead by one run until Boyer singled home the insurance run in the seventh.

Red Schoendienst was one-for-three, and the former Cardinal star looked himself at second base. Once over the idea that he was out of uniform in the Giants' traveling grays, there was sufficient proof he was indeed, Schoendienst.

Triple for Repulski. The home stand began with a paid attendance of 14,448. Among final sights was Rip Repulski tripling in the eighth, and then becoming an easy out, as with rookie Hal Smith at bat, Rip tried to steal home and was retired in a grand confusion of signals.

Champion Hart Plays Buchholz In Munny Tennis

Three of St. Louis's leading young tennis players, Earl (Butch) Buchholz, Neil Drury and Al Holtmann along with the defending titleholder, Ralph Hart, are in the men's singles semifinals of the annual Munny tennis championship tournament. Buchholz meets Hart and Holtmann plays Drury at 1 p.m. today.

Play will be at Tower Grove Park if the Jefferson Memorial courts in Forest Park are too wet.

Buchholz (No. 2) and Hart (No. 3 seeded), had fairly easy sailing yesterday with Butch beating Wayne C. Smith, 6-3, 6-1, and Hart eliminating his doubles partner, Ward Parker, 6-3, 6-0.

Holtmann, the 1954 champion who was seeded No. 1, got a real scare when Ted Simmons, one year out of the junior ranks, forced the match to three sets. Ted, Dearfield (Conn.) Academy graduate, threw a puzzling drive at Holtmann to win the first set 6-4, but Al, student at Illinois U., came back to take the next two, 6-1, 6-4. Simmons paired with Dick Ogden of New Camden, Conn., to win the national interscholastic doubles title a month ago.

Drury, Country Day School's No. 1 player who drew fourth seed, encountered a great deal of difficulty to beat Bob Zier-vogel (No. 8), 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. Parker was seeded No. 7 and Smith was No. 6.

Mrs. Marcela Parker plays his wife, Weinstein, in a semifinal match today at 3 p.m. The other semifinal, with Carole Boshard meeting Erika Puetz, is scheduled for tomorrow at 1:30.

Miss Weinstein, a former junior champion, captured the endurance prize on yesterday's program. It took her three hours and 10 minutes to beat Marilyn Mueller, 6-4, 7-9, 7-5. Miss Mueller had match point in the second set and held a 5-2 lead in the third set before Miss Weinstein won out.

Women's doubles and mixed doubles finals will be played tomorrow.

Yesterday's Results.

QUARTERFINALS: Earl Buchholz defeated Wayne C. Smith, 6-3, 6-1; Al Holtmann defeated Ted Simmons, 6-4, 6-3; Neil Drury defeated Bob Zier-vogel, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

SEMI-FINALS: Don Dippold and Wayne C. Smith vs. Earl Buchholz and Neil Drury, 7-5, 6-0; Ralph Hart and Ward Parker vs. Al Holtmann and Dick Ogden, 6-4, 6-3.

Kansas City and Columbus Feud Over Player Transfer

COLUMBUS, O., July 13 (UP)—The Columbus Jets told the Kansas City Athletics today that star center fielder Al Pilarek will not be permitted to leave the International League club until a suitable replacement is available.

A feud between the two clubs boiled over when the Athletics called up Pilarek, leader in recent International League All-Star team balloting. The hard-hitting outfielder was on full assignment to Columbus.

Jets General Manager Harold M. Cooper said Kansas City General Manager Parke Carroll agreed to send the Jets five players, including outfielder Al Van Alstyne of Richmond.

However, Columbus learned, according to Cooper, that Van Alstyne faces surgery for a split spinal disk and will be out of action for three weeks. Cooper said Columbus needed a good outfielder to replace Pilarek, and he made this clear to Carroll. But Cooper said neither Carroll nor Richmond informed him of Van Alstyne's condition.

"The Athletics could have sent us Rance Pless, one of the top players in the American Association, and nothing would have been said," Cooper said.

Pless along with two other players, was sent by the Athletics to Richmond, a New York Yankee farm club in the International League.

Cooper told Kansas City that Columbus did not intend to renew its relationship at the end of the 1956 season.

Meanwhile, the Jets had the sympathy of Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick Thursday following their termination of a major league working agreement with the Athletics.

International League President Frank J. Shaughnessy said he contacted Frick immediately after learning of the details of the feud.

Shaughnessy said, "I told the commissioner it was a terrible way for a major league club to treat a minor league affiliate. He agreed wholeheartedly and said he would immediately contact the Kansas City front office on the matter."

GOLF

By ROBERT MORRISON
EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo.,
July 13.
Some Clambake.

HERE must be nothing quite like a women's state amateur golf tournament. . . . It's a gathering of teenagers, coeds, wives, mothers, grandmothers, and business women who have been bitten by the golf bug and somehow find the time from household or office to play it with the hope of winning.

It's a week in another world—for some excitement, for some relief from home routine, for others the pleasure of playing a game of skill, for some just playing a game without needing too much skill. . . . And the Women's State Amateur has a passing scene all its own. One of the liveliest members showed up for the tournament here with a surrealist's bonnet of straw, dangle a couple of jingling bells from the high crown. "When my opponent goes to putt, I'll just shake my head," she said. "I can't lose."

From early until late, the women spend much of the day at the golf course. In the evening they may gather and talk about the game they played that day. . . . They may chatter so long and late they don't get enough sleep, but the ones scheduled to play at the crack of dawn are there at the tee again bright as daisies.

Sometimes they revert to the boarding school type. . . . One told the story of her roommate lifting the alarm clock in a refrigerator in their motel quarters, then watching in glee as the sleepyhead got up and tried to answer what she thought was the telephone bell.

When the flock descended upon Excelsior Springs for the first time in the history of these events, which incidentally have been held even before the 18-year run under the present state women's organization, it created a bit of a strain on the routine of this placid spa. Many of the inns served meals only at limited hours and tournament playing golfers, apt to like to dine late and leisurely, were inconvenienced. But this resort town offered resort weather and thanks to excellent rainfall this summer, the course was in fine condition.

Flight Eight.

THE fun and sociability aspect of a women's state amateur tournament is the simple explanation of so many classes of play being provided for those who don't shoot golf at a state championship level.

Even with a relatively small entry of almost 140 players, the current tournament developed match play flights down to the eighth division, 16 players to a division. Losers in each flight continued in consolation play. This is an old custom, one indulged in even in men's tournaments, but the pressure of such heavy play on golf courses led the men to restrict their activities to championship determination. The men still get a big field, but maybe they don't have so much fun as the women who mostly are not trying to prove anything in an athletic way.

And, after all, a player has to start somewhere in the tournament game. Maybe it's not completely useless. On the first day of match play here, the very last flight-eight match went extra holes. While weary officials and sports reporters wisecracked about this uninvited extension to the day's duties, the two embattled golfers valiantly walked down the first hole. When they returned, the loser, a young woman who was playing the game for all it was worth, reported in amazement and rising tone of disbelief: "Yes, I was defeated."

Do you know what my opponent got on that extra hole? She got a par."

So that's life in the eighth flight, similar to life in the eighth flight at all in a recent golf publication article. Asked to tell the story of his experiences, the eighth flighter wailed: "I certainly will. Tournament after tournament I've played. If I get my name in the paper at all it's in that little type they use for the classified ads. You put big headlines about the championship and how big the field is. But once the tournament starts you forget all about it. Remember it's fellows like me who build up the field."

Tony Lindemann Regains Lead

PARAMUS, N.J., July 13 (AP)—Tony Lindemann of Detroit moved back into the lead yesterday in the $17,750 National League of Bowling Round-Robin at Paramus Bowling.

Lindemann, out for the $5000 top prize in the competition which ends July 18, posted the top score in the competition thus far—a 266 in the seventh round.

The standings after eight rounds:

Rank	Name	Score	Points
1	Lindemann, Det.	10	328
2	King, Cleveland	10	323
3	Arndt, Minn.	10	317
4	Belcher, Los A.	8	321
5	Weber, N.Y.	9	308
6	Trebbin, Houston	7	301
7	Brown, Jersey C.	5	307

Miss Rubelee Holds Three Up Lead in State Golf Final

Mrs. Johnson Fails to Keep Early Edge

By Robert Morrison
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., July 13—Pat Rubelee, 30-year-old Kansas City district champion, won the last five holes of the morning round to be three up against former champion Mrs. Robert S. Johnson in their Missouri women's amateur tournament final today.

The 1951 winner of this event, also of Kansas City, had been two up after nine holes and after 12, but then began to tire, and she hit many of her shots poorly. Miss Rubelee scored the morning round in 83, five over women's par. Mrs. Johnson had 87.

The finalists exchanged advantage twice in the early going, then Mrs. Johnson moved ahead with a birdie to win the seventh hole. She won the ninth to be out in 42, two over women's par, and was two up.

Mrs. Johnson bogeyed to lose the 14th and 15th holes then dropped the 16th to Miss Rubelee's birdie, gained with an eight-foot putt. On the next hole, Miss Rubelee holed out a seven-footer for a par to win and then on No. 18 a par was good enough for another win.

After heavy overnight rain, skies cleared and the 6351-yard Excelsior Springs course dried out quickly.

It was only the third time in 11 post war tournaments that the final did not have a St. Louis representative.

Musial and Dark Get Redbirds Off on Winning Foot in Home Stand

Cards Defeat Gomez But Drop to Fifth as Pirates Capture Two

By Jack Rice

The ups and downs of the Cardinals have been simple to follow this season. First they went up, and then they went down, and today they are at that checkpoint known as half-way through the season. All they must do is decide which way they go next, and to date they haven't gone very far since last year.

Major league baseball teams play 154 games, barring pennant playoffs, which right now may be regarded as an unforeseen circumstance. The Cardinals played their seventy-seventh game last night at Busch Stadium, and it was a 5-to-3 victory over the Giants. But Pittsburgh won a double-header from Chicago, took over fourth place and dropped the Redbirds into fifth place and second division.

The 1956 Cardinals now are two games and about 15 trades ahead of the 1955 Cardinals, and you know what happened to the 1955 Cardinals. They were voted the "best seventh place team in the history of baseball," a compliment that Frank Lane kept repeating to himself every time he swapped off another half-dozen of them.

19 Games Out Last Year. At this stage of the schedule last year the Cardinals had won 36 games and had lost 41, and now they have won 38 and have lost 39. If that seems to be modest progress, then the rest of the league has been standing around with them.

The secret is, of course, that nobody has been allowed to imitate Brooklyn of 1955, not even Brooklyn. After 77 games last year the Cardinals were 19 games out of first place.

They now are 12 games better off on that count, anyway, just seven games out of first place. They may consider the present company at Busch Stadium and remember a recent miracle accomplished by the Giants under their former patron saint, Leo Durocher. All growing boys as a goal, let them take to shooting pool when they see they are going to be late getting home, anyhow.

Dark Starts With Bang. The Cardinals had lost four successive games before they met the Giants as the begining on a home stand. They started in strong and familiar fashion. Stan Musial hit a home run in the first inning. Al Dark had gone before him, with a double. It looked as if it would be a night to do things the easy way for the Cardinal starter was Tom Poholsky. He had been growing on the Cardinals as a steady influence, the man most likely to succeed after a string of failures by other pitchers.

It did not work that way at all, because Hank Thompson hit a home run after Willie Mays singled in the second inning. Musial singled home Don Blasingame in the third for a 3-2 Cardinal lead, and there was one thing about that one-run lead. When it went, it was a sight to see.

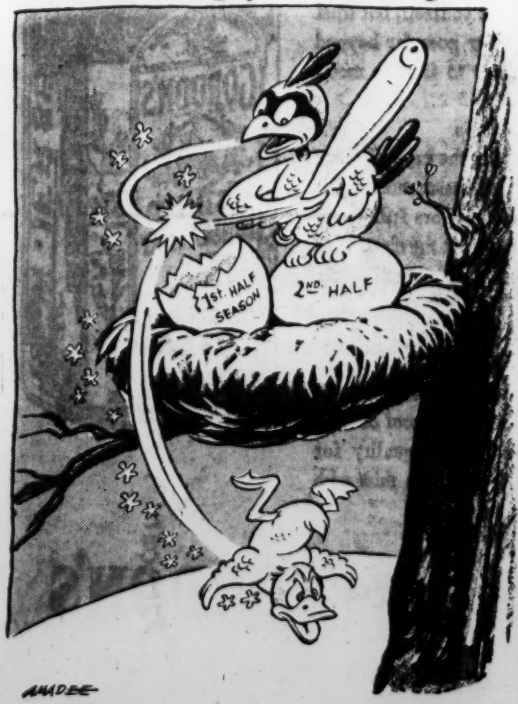

Mays led off the fourth inning with a home run that made an unconstructed American League pitcher press his back to the wall. A light standard was all that saved the memory of Mickey Mantle's home run over the left field wall and out of the park. Mantle hit his into trees or onto a roof of a house across the street from the left field wall. The trees and the roof wouldn't talk, and people who did, couldn't all agree. The ball Mays hit was above the scoreboard, and headed for Fairground Park until the iron-work stopped it. Poholsky said, "It was going north—to Wisconsin, I guess."

Liddle Is the Winner. Poholsky retired the next man, but went quickly after Thompson hit an arching single, and Darryl Spencer walked. Don Liddle, the recent Giant, relieved Poholsky and when the Cardinals patched together two runs in the seventh Liddle became a winner. Hal Smith singled into center after one run was out in the seventh and Giants starter Ruben Gomez walked Grady Hatton, at bat for Liddle.

Don Blasingame popped a single into center, and the bases were loaded. Out of respect to Mays' arm, nobody budged for home. Dark, doing nobly for anyone keeping tab on how men the Giants traded for Red Schoendienst were doing against them, scored Smith with a sacrifice fly against reliever Mark Grissom. The other runners advanced on it, and Hatton scored on Boyer's deep-infield hit, a stoppable but unplayable ball.

Larry Jackson held the Giants hitless the final two innings. The Cardinals won Game No. 77 last year, too, and Jackson pitched the final inning, keeping the opposition scoreless. It was a place to let the comparisons die.

Out, Ugly Duckling!

Rough Way to Treat an Old Friend

Ex-teammates HAL SMITH (sliding) and BILL SARNI spread each other over the Busch Stadium landscape as Smith scores for the Cardinals in the seventh inning. Sarni, the Giants' catcher, is covering the plate, taking a throw from Don Mueller. The Cardinals won, 5-3.

Dickson, Mizell and Schmidt Next in Cards' Rotation Plan

Murry Dickson will start tonight for the Cardinals against the Giants at Busch Stadium. Dickson and his knuckleball and his 6-and-7 record and his crafty determination represent the beginning of well-laid pitching plans.

Vinegar Bend Mizell will pitch Saturday against the Giants. Said Manager Fred Hutchinson, and Sunday Willard Schmidt will start one game of a double-header against the Phils here, and the bonus youth, Lindy McDaniel, may come in for his constant efforts in the bullpen for a start he has earned.

Then, said Hutchinson, Tom Poholsky will get to try again. Long before that, Poholsky will have had an interview with Pitching Coach Bill Posedel. "I must be doing something wrong but I can't figure out what it is," Poholsky said.

Mays' Home Prodigious. Willie Mays' home run against Poholsky was one of the hardest-hit balls Cardinal players could recall seeing. "He hit it off the handle," said Poholsky, dead-pan. Willard Schmidt looked at Poholsky, grinned and said, "That's the first light tower I ever saw with handles."

Hutchinson searched his memory, but not far because he seemed sure of the results, and said it was about the longest he ever had seen. The ball went over the bleachers twice, once going, and once coming back on the rebound from the tower it hit.

This long drive came as Willie made his mid-summer change in weights—from a 34-ounce bat to a 33 and one-half ounce bat. He defends this as a reasonable half-ounce of prevention: "It may not seem like much to bigger guys, but it seems a lot lighter to me about this time of the year."

Dark and Blasingame figured in two snappy double plays which drew sighs of relief from Redbird followers. The Giants on base in the fourth. Pitcher Gomez lined to Dark whose under-handed toss doubled Darryl Spencer off second for the inning-ending out. In the seventh, with the score tied, 3-3, and the Giants having an other bases-loaded situation, the side was retired, Blasingame to Dark to Musial, which kept the roof from falling in on Don Liddle.

Musial's three runs-batted-in tied him with team-mate Ken Boyer for the league lead. Each has 61. Musial was ahead by one run until Boyer singled home the insurance run in the seventh.

Red Schoendienst was one-for-three, and the former Cardinal star looked himself at second base. Once over the idea that he was out of uniform in the Giants' traveling party, there was sufficient proof he was indeed, Schoendienst.

Triple for Repulski. The home stand began with a paid attendance of 14,448. Among final sights was Rip Repulski tripling in the eighth, and then becoming an easy out as, with rookie Hal Smith at bat, Rip tried to steal home and was retired in a grand confusion of signals.

More than 500 junior members of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Association of St. Louis and St. Louis County will attend the game tomorrow as guests of the Cardinals.

Jackie Price will put on his show next Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock, a half-hour before game-time. He is the baseball specialist who does such things as catch fly balls while driving a jeep. —J.R.

Champion Hart Plays Buchholz In Muny Tennis

Three of St. Louis's leading young tennis players, Earl (Butch) Buchholz, Neil Drury and Al Holtmann along with the defending titleholder, Ralph Hart are in the men's singles semifinals of the annual Muny tennis championship tournament. Buchholz meets Hart and Holtmann plays Drury at 1 p.m. today.

Play will be at Tower Grove Park if the Jefferson Memorial courts in Forest Park are too wet.

Buchholz (No. 2) and Hart (No. 3 seeded), had fairly easy sailing yesterday with Buchholz beating Wayne C. Smith, 6-3, 6-1, and Hart eliminating his doubles partner, Ward Parker, 6-3, 6-0.

Holtmann, the 1954 champion who was seeded No. 1, got a real scare when Ted Simmons, one year out of the junior ranks, forced the match to three sets. Ted, Dearthfield (Conn.) Academy graduate, threw a puzzling drive at Holtmann to win the first set 6-4, but Al, student at Illinois U., came back to take the next two, 6-1, 6-4.

Simmons paired with Dick Ogden of New Camden, Conn., to win the national interscholastic doubles title a month ago.

Drury, Country Day School's No. 1 player who drew fourth seed, encountered a great deal of difficulty to beat Bob Ziervogel (No. 8), 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. Parker was seeded No. 7 and Smith was No. 6.

Mrs. Mercina Parker plays Lois Weinstein in a semifinal match today at 3 p.m. The other semifinal, with Carole Boshart meeting Erika Puetz, is scheduled for tomorrow at 1:30.

Miss Weinstein, a former junior champion, captured the endurance prize on yesterday's program by defeating her three hours and 10 minutes to beat Marilyn Mueller, 6-4, 7-9, 7-5.

Miss Mueller had match point in the second set and held a 5-2 lead in the third set before Miss Weinstein won out.

Women's doubles and mixed doubles finals will be played tomorrow.

Yesterday's Results. MEN'S SINGLES. GUARANTY: Earl Buchholz defeated Wayne C. Smith, 6-3, 6-1; Ralph Hart defeated Ward Parker, 6-3, 6-0; Al Holtmann defeated Ted Simmons, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4; Neil Drury defeated Bob Ziervogel, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3.

QUARTERFINALS. Neil Drury and Earl Buchholz defeated Don Fram and William Kasper, 6-0, 6-4.

Five Teams Tied for Women's Golf Lead. HOT SPRINGS, Va., July 13 (AP)—An unprecedented five teams shared the lead today as play entered the second round in the $6500 Hot Springs Women's Four-ball golf tournament.

But strangely, neither the favored pair nor the defending champions were among the tied toppers.

The leaders, who posted three under-par 71's in yesterday's opening round of the 72-hole event, were Louise Suggs and Gloria Ficht; Beverly Hanson and Kathy Cornelius; Alice Bauer and Betty Bush; Marilyn Smith and Faye Crocker; and Betty Dodd and Peggy Kirk.

A stroke back was the favored entry of Marlene Bauer Hagge and Mickey Wright. Two strokes in arrears was the defending title team of Mary Lena Faulk and Betty Jameson. Gloria Armstrong and Joyce Ziske also posted a 74.

Babe Zaharias Again Undergoes Surgery
GALVESTON, Tex., July 13 (UP)—Famous woman athlete Babe Zaharias underwent surgery at 10 a.m. today in John Sealy Hospital, where she is fighting her third battle with cancer.

Doctors had not released any information as to the Babe's condition or why she was operated on.

Mrs. Zaharias recently celebrated her forty-second birthday. She entered the hospital last March 29.

Kansas City and Columbus Feud Over Player Transfer

COLUMBUS, O., July 13 (UPI)—The Columbus Jets told the Kansas City Athletics today that star center fielder Al Pilarcik will not be permitted to leave the International League club until a suitable replacement is available.

A feud between the two clubs boiled over when the Athletics called up Pilarcik, leader in recent International League All-Star team balloting. The hard-hitting outfielder was on full assignment to Columbus.

Jets General Manager Harold M. Cooper said Kansas City General Manager Parke Carroll agreed to send the five players, including outfielder Al Van Alstyne of Richmond.

However, Columbus learned, according to Cooper, that Van Alstyne faces surgery for a split spinal disk and will be out of action for three weeks. Cooper said Columbus needed a good outfielder to replace Pilarcik and he made this clear to Carroll. But Cooper said neither Carroll nor Richmond informed him of Van Alstyne's condition.

"The Athletics could have sent us Rance Plies, one of the top players in the American Association, and nothing would have been said," Cooper said.

Pless along with two other players, was sent by the Athletics to Richmond, a New York Yankee farm club in the International League.

Some Clambake.

HERE must be nothing quite like a women's state amateur golf tournament. It's a gathering of teenagers, coeds, wives, mothers, grandmothers, and business women who have been bitten by the golf bug and somehow find the time from household or office to play it with the hope of winning.

It's a week in another world—for some excitement, for some relief from home routine, for others the pleasure of playing a game of skill, for some just playing a game without needing too much skill. And the Women's State Amateur has a passing scene all its own. One of the liveliest members showed up for the tournament here with a surrealistic bonnet of straw, dangle a couple of jingling bells from the high crown. "When my opponent goes to putt, I'll just shake my head," she said. "I can't lose."

From early until late, the women spend much of the day at the golf course. In the evening they may gather and talk about the game they played that day. They may chatter so long and late they don't get enough sleep, but the ones scheduled to play at the crack of dawn are there at the tee again bright as daisies.

Sometimes they revert to the boarding school type. One told the story of her roommate hiding the alarm clock in a refrigerator in their hotel quarters, then watching in glee as the sleepy-head got up and tried to answer what she thought was the telephone bell.

When the flock descended upon Excelsior Springs for the first time in the history of these events, which incidentally have been held ever before the 18-year run under the present state women's organization, it created a bit of a strain on the routine of this placid spa. Many of the inns served meals only at limited hours and tournament playing golfers, apt to like to dine late and leisurely, were inconvenienced. But this resort town offered resort weather and thanks to excellent rainfall this summer, the course was in fine condition.

Flight Eight.

THE fun and sociability aspect of a women's state amateur tournament is the simple explanation of so many classes of play being provided for those who don't shoot golf at a state championship level. Even with a relatively small entry of almost 140 players, the current tournament developed match play flights down to the eighth division, 16 players to a division. Losers in each flight continued in consolation play. This is an old custom, once indulged in even in men's tournaments, but the pressure of such heavy play on golf courses led the men to restrict their activities to championship determination. The men still get a big field, but maybe they don't have so much fun as the women who mostly are not trying to prove anything in an athletic way.

And, after all, a player has to start somewhere in the tournament game. Maybe it's not completely useless. On the first day of match play here, the very last flight-eight match went extra holes. While weary officials and sports reporters wise-checked about this uninvited extension to the day's duties, the two embattled golfers valiantly walked down the first hole. When they returned, the loser, a young woman who was playing the game for all it was worth, reported in amazement and rising tone of disbelief: "Yes, I was defeated. Do you know what my opponent got on that extra hole? She got a par."

So that's life in the eighth flight, similar to life in the eighth flight as told in a recent golf publication article. Asked to tell the story of his experiences, the eighth flighter wailed: "I certainly will. Tournament after tournament I've played. If I get my name in the paper at all it's in that little type they use for the classified ads. You put it in headlines about the championship and how big the field is. But once the tournament starts you forget all about it. Remember it's fellows like me who build up the field."

Tony Lindemann Regains Lead

PARAMUS, N.J., July 13 (AP)—Tony Lindemann of Detroit moved back into the lead yesterday in the $17,750 National League of Bowling Round-Robin at Paramus Bowling.

Lindemann, out for the $5000 top prize in the competition which ends July 18, posted the top score in the competition thus far—a 266 in the seventh round.

Miss Rubelee Holds Three Up Lead in State Golf Final

Mrs. Johnson Fails to Keep Early Edge

By Robert Morrison
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.
EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., July 13—Pat Rubelee, 30-year-old Kansas City district champion, won the last five holes of the morning round to be three up against former champion Mrs. Robert S. Johnson in their Missouri women's amateur tournament final today.

The 1951 winner of this event, also of Kansas City, had been two up after nine holes and after 12, but then began to tire, and she hit many of her shots poorly. Miss Rubelee scored the morning round in 83, five over women's par. Mrs. Johnson had 87.

The finalists exchanged advantage twice in the early going, then Mrs. Johnson moved ahead with a birdie to win the seventh hole. She won the ninth to be out in 42, two over women's par, and was two up.

Mrs. Johnson bogeyed to lose the 14th and 15th holes then dropped the 16th to Miss Rubelee's birdie, gained with an eight-foot putt. On the next hole, Miss Rubelee holed out a seven-footer for a par to win and on No. 18 a par was good enough for another win.

After heavy overnight rain, greens cleared and the 6351-yard Excelsior Springs course dried out quickly.

It was only the third time in 11 post war tournaments that the final did not have a St. Louis representative.

Hi, Roomie! How Do You Like Broadway?

Among the first to greet RED SCHOENDIENST (right) on his first appearance at Busch Stadium since his recent trade to New York was his former roommate, STAN MUSIAL. Chief subject of their pre-game chat was the condition of Red's injured shoulder. Schoendienst helped the Giant cause with one hit, a single; Musial got a single and home run and the Cardinals won the game, 5-3.

Buhl Beats Dodgers for Fifth Time This Season; Braves Only Four Points Out of First Place

NEW YORK, July 13 (UP)—Bob Buhl, a guy with the "Indian Sign" on Brooklyn, fixed things today so that the Milwaukee Braves were giving Cincinnati the high sign that they're about ready to take over first place again in the National League.

Buhl took care of matters accounted for the Cubs' lone run. Long's first home run in more than a month broke a 2-0, scattering six hits and pushing the Braves to win in four percentage points of the pace-setting Redlegs, who bowed to the Phillies, 7-4.

Buhl's fine performance against the Dodgers earned him his tenth victory of the campaign just before the thunderstorm washed out what was scheduled to be the second game of a two-night double-header.

Big Joe Adcock got the Braves started with his 13th home run in the fourth inning off Roger Craig, his fifth off Dodger pitching—and Milwaukee added an insurance run in the fifth when Eddie Mathews singled home Danny O'Connell.

Haddix Gains Victory.
Milwaukee's victory cut a full game off Cincinnati's lead, the Redlegs falling victim to a five-run rally by the Phillies in the ninth inning. Trailing Art Fowler 3-2 until the ninth, the Phillies fashioned their outburst with the aid of a two-run double by Billy Blaylock and a two-run single by Elmer Valo.

Southpaw Harvey Haddix, nicked for a two-run homer by Ed Bailey in the second inning, was credited with his seventh triumph. Pittsburgh moved into fourth place by sweeping a double-header from Chicago, 2-1 and 5-4. Ron Kline posted his eighth victory in the opener as Bill Virdon homered for one run and Dale Long and Jack Shepard each doubled for the other. Ernie Banks' 22nd homer on the return.

Lou Cassett failed to qualify for the championship when he added an 86 to his 78 of Wednesday. He was paired against Bobby Ladd of Memphis in the second division bracket.

Pitcher Morris Martin

To Baltimore Orioles

BALTIMORE, Md., July 13 (UP)—The Baltimore Orioles today obtained Morris Martin, a left-handed relief pitcher, from the Chicago White Sox for the $10,000 waiver price.

Martin has appeared in 10 games with the White Sox this year, all in relief. He has a 1-0 record, scoring his only triumph over the Orioles.

To make room for Martin, Manager Paul Richards said he would ask waivers on Bobby Adams, a utility infielder who has a .225 batting average after appearing in 41 games.

Parks Golfers In Semifinals Of Title Meet

SAN FRANCISCO, July 13 (UP)—Little June Buxbaum of Memphis, Tenn., took a 1-up lead today over San Francisco's Jimmy Wilbert at the end of 18 holes in their 36-hole semifinals match of the National Public Links golf tournament.

At the same time Bill Scarbrough, a Navy man from Jacksonville, Fla., took a solid 3-up margin at the halfway mark in his match with Ovid Seyler, of San Francisco.

Scarbrough was in front all the way in the morning round against Seyler. He collected four birdies, but had four bogies for an even par 72.

At the fourteenth hole, Scarbrough was five up over the 43-year-old San Francisco fireman. However, bogies on the fifteenth and eighteenth cost the Navy man a hole a piece.

Buxbaum, a former professional, was one down at the end of nine and two down after the tenth when he three-put from 10 feet.

But he was a picture of consistency after that as he quickly overcame Wilbert's lead. The Memphis man parred the eleventh with a 15-foot putt, birdied the twelfth when he put his approach six inches from the pin and went ahead for the first time on the sixteenth when he got a par against Wilbert's bogey.

Buxbaum was one over par at the end of the round. Wilbert had a 74.

The four semi-finalists battled through cold fog yesterday to score double victories in the march to the championship victories which put such crowd pleasers as Medalist Scotty McNeath and Jim North out of the running.

But there wasn't a fluke victory.

Cochran Plays Southerner In Memphis Golf

MEMPHIS, July 13 (AP)—Veteran Bob Cochran had no trouble qualifying for the championship flight in the Colonial Invitation tournament yesterday. He added a 72 to Wednesday's 74 for 146 total, four strokes behind Medalist Bob Goetz of Arlington, Tex., a member of the Oklahoma A.&M. golf team.

Cochran drew Curtis Person Sr., Memphis veteran who qualified with 149, as his first-round opponent. A single round of match play is slated Friday, two Saturday and two Sunday.

Cochran started out with an eight-foot birdie putt, then three-putted Nos. 2 and 7. He bogied 10 with a five put his second shot in trouble on 11 and his second over the green on 14. But then he recovered for a birdie on 16 with an eight-footer and another good putt on 17 for a birdie two. He was 37 on the return.

Lou Cassett failed to qualify for the championship when he added an 86 to his 78 of Wednesday. He was paired against Bobby Ladd of Memphis in the second division bracket.

BETTER GOLF IN FIVE MINUTES

By Victor J. East

The writer is a master club designer who has spent half a century playing golf, teaching and perfecting golf club designs. In these articles, of which this is the fifth of a series, he gets right down to the basic questions of what makes a good golfer an expert. He tells how best to put your clubs to work for you, how to keep your movements natural, how to choose the most effective swing, plus a score of other invaluable tips that will help you improve your game.

THE PUTTER is the golfer's tool for accuracy within inches. Your tee shot must only be accurate within 50 yards, the average width of a fairway. Shots to the green must range within a 20-yard width. But the putt has its accuracy requirement narrowed down to four and one-quarter inches, the width of the hole. Quite obviously, there must be a great amount of precision in the club designed for that purpose.

The first thing to look for in a putter is true face alignment. If the face surface is untrue, as was the case with Bob Jones' "calamity Jane," don't buy it. Test the putter you now own with a straight edge. If you find it is not flat from one end of the face to the other, don't use it. It will only be the source of heartache.

Look for a putter that is easy to line up; and in this regard, pay particular attention to the top line of the face. Make sure it is true and visible for its full length. It is also advisable to have all rectangular lines of its full length square to the face. You will find it much easier to square up or line up a putter that has no curved lines to deceive your eyes.

Try to choose a putter that has an even amount of material on both sides of the center line of the shaft. The resulting evenness or balance will reduce to a minimum the tendency of the putter to turn or twist at the moment of impact.

Sense of Hearing.

I MIGHT surprise you by mentioning that there is a third sense involved in the art of putting. You are already aware of the senses of sight and touch; but have you ever considered the importance of the sense of hearing? A friend of mine hadn't, until one day when we were playing in a rainstorm. I had loaned him my raincoat, equipped with a hood. He missed a short, exasperating putt; and he explained to me that he couldn't understand it. His putting game was way off, for no apparent reason. He was finally convinced that his game was not off, but that he couldn't hear the shots. It ruined his accuracy.

Select a putter with a good "ring" or "ping" to it, and your accuracy will improve. It is significant to note that the cured by some serious study on the green. You cannot solve putting problems permanently by purchasing new putters — neither can you solve them by the "smash and replace" technique. I can't say that you will improve by emulating the style of a more fortunate duffer. Many are convinced that putting is controlled by a supernatural force, and that their success or failure is determined at birth.

Just as it is with everything else, you can improve your putting only by understanding and practicing the funda-mentals. This will require a study of club design, grip, aim, and swing, as well as certain exercises.

PUTTING: To insure that the ball will roll true, it is advisable to have the putting "follow on" squarely. Because the shaft angle is inclined away from the vertical, this is best accomplished by having the hands and arms travel forward with the putter head as shown. What happens immediately afterward is a matter of individual choice.

Selecting Putter.

P UTTERS come in all sorts of different sizes, shapes, weights and colors. They differ from other irons in their more vertical and, generally, smooth face. In selecting a putter, be sure it has a comfortable "feel." Beyond that, it becomes a matter of personal taste. Whatever type you select, be careful to position your hands to see the ball's sides line up parallel with the face of the putter. Do this in taking putters which have produced the largest volume of sales during the past 30 years have been those with the higher tonal note.

Since putting amounts to about 50 per cent of your game, half your golfing ills can be held of the putter in preparation for the stroke. By this means, the putter face becomes a true extension of your hands, particularly the front sides of the fingers.

Your sense of aim must be keenly developed through practice, and your eye will have to be trained to pick out minute details that will influence the distance and direction of the ball's roll to the hole. All good putters have one thing in common—their eyes are directly over the ball when they take their position for the stroke, as well as when they are making the stroke.

The stroke in putting is tempered because of a short distance involved. You are not primarily concerned with power; but you are still very definitely concerned with distance and direction. The Basic Movement is still employed. This shot does not involve loft. But the proper negotiation of the Basic Movement will insure the follow-through that so many golfers neglect while putting.

Points to Remember.

1. Have your eyes directly over the ball while taking position and during the actual stroke.
2. Line up the palm sides of your hands parallel to the face of the putter.
3. Observe all the elements that will influence the roll of your ball.
4. Practice getting the feel of the ball.

William, Mary Suspension Is Lifted by AAU.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., July 13 (AP)—The Amateur Athletic Union has lifted the suspension it imposed earlier this year on the William and Mary track team for competing in a meet with Wes Santee.

Athletic Director Jackie Freeman said last night he was informed by John T. Core, chairman of the Virginia A.A.U.'s track and field committee, that the lifting of the suspension was retroactive to July 1.

William and Mary's entire track team was barred from A.A.U. competition after the Indians competed against the Quantico Marines April 14. Santee, suspended for life by the A.A.U. for accepting excessive expense money, ran the mile and anchored a winning Marine relay team.

The Southern Conference, of which William and Mary is a member, protested the suspension at its spring meeting. Besides two of his teammates, Santee was opposed in the mile by two W.M. freshmen.

Mexican Government Cancels Pan-American Road Race for 1956

MEXICO CITY, July 13 (AP)—The Mexican government said yesterday the Pan-American road race would not be held this year.

Walter C. Buchanan, minister of communications, said the famed automobile race could be considered "suspended indefinitely."

The sixth Pan-American road race, scheduled for last Dec. 2-5, was suspended Aug. 8. The government, in calling off that year's contest, said it was cancelled for "purposes of safety."

The 1955 suspension followed shortly the French LeMans road race tragedy which killed scores of drivers and spectators. At the time, the government did not say future races would be suspended, too.

The 2000-mile Pan-American race originated in 1950, and in five years grew to become one of the top contests of its kind in the world, competing with the famed European races.

The world's top drivers were entered year after year, but the race, held over public highways from the southern border at Guatemala to the Texas border on the north, suffered sensational casualties annually.

Lightburn, Zulueta In TV Bout Tonight

NEW YORK, July 13 (AP)—Ludwig Lightburn, hailed only a few months ago as the brightest young lightweight prospect in years, will attempt to get back on the beam tonight when he tackles Cuba's Orlando Zulueta, six years his senior and, by comparison, a regular granddaddy in experience. (The bout will be telecast by KSD-TV.)

The 10-round bout in Madison Square Garden generally is regarded as nothing more than a substitute fight, booked to fill television commitments when an injured hand forced Joey Giambra to postpone his scheduled scrap with Rocky Castellani.

Omaha Sweeps Doubleheader

OMAHA, Neb., July 13 (UP)—The Omaha Cardinals took both ends of a double-header from St. Paul winning the first 4-3, and the second 7-5, in American Association play last night.

In the first game, a make-up of Wednesday's rained out contest, the losing Saints outlived Omaha 9-4, but Card fielder Danny Schell came through with a game-winning ninth-inning homer with the bases empty.

In the second game the Cards outlived St. Paul 12-9. The Minneapolis Millers ran up a 9-1 lead over the front-running Denver Bears, and broke up a Bear rally in the eighth to win, 9-5.

Miller pitcher Frank Barnes had a three-hitter going into the eighth when the Denver batters found the range. They went to work to drive in four runs on three hits. Phil Paine of the Millers replaced Barnes and retired the side.

Vern Rapp and Bill Taylor hit homers for the winners. In other action, Charleston poured Wichita, 14-4, with a 15-hit attack. Four Wichita pitchers paraded to the mound in the slugfest.

Indianapolis eased out Louisville 11-8 in a rather heavy-hitting contest. The Indians collected 18 hits off three Colonels pitchers while the losers picked up 12.

Diamond Hal Wins

$25,000 Pacing Derby

WESTBURY, N.Y., July 13 (UP)—Diamond Hal, a five-year-old son of Hal Dale-Treasure, displayed a tremendous finishing kick in the final quarter and then survived a three-horse photo finish to score a head victory over Dottie's Pick in the eleventh annual edition of the $25,000 National Pacing Derby at Roosevelt Raceway last night.

The pacer, owned by Sol A. Camp of Shafter, Calif., and driven by Joe O'Brien, covered the mile and one-quarter in 2:33.4. Diamond Hal returned $10.70, $5.60 and $4.70.

Making up a four and a half length deficit from fifth place as the field hit the top of the stretch, Diamond Hal, under an all-out drive by O'Brien, caught Del Miller's Dottie's Pick in the final stride to win. Philip Scott, driven by John Simpson, who set most of the early pace, tired in the stretch but hung on gamely to nip Eddie Cobb's Amortizer for show honors in the seven horse field.

No Free Tabs for Live Black Tabbies On Friday the 13th

TORONTO, July 13 (UP).

THE Toronto Maple Leafs Baseball Club yesterday withdrew its offer to let fans with black cats into tonight's game in Toronto free of charge.

A threat that a charge of contributing to juvenile delinquency might be laid against the club resulted in the cancellation of the offer, which also included a promise to let persons with dead black cats into the game for 50 cents the night of Friday, the 13th.

The Toronto Humane Society, incensed by the offer, protested that it would lead children to steal or kill cats.

Patterson's Hand Pronounced OK After Cast Is Off

NEW YORK, July 13 (AP)—

The broken right hand of Floyd Patterson was pronounced fit and almost ready for action yesterday.

Moore and Patterson are the principal claimants to the heavyweight title that Marciano resigned April 27.

A plaster cast was removed today from Patterson's hand, which he broke in winning a split decision from Hurricane Jackson June 8 in a fight considered an elimination contest on the way to the heavyweight championship.

Dr. H. Leslie Wenger, New York bone specialist who treated Patterson, told a New York Boxing Writers Association luncheon that X-rays showed there was "an excellent union with good, solid callous formation. Functionally he will have as good a hand as he ever had. He can be ready in September."

This last was in reference to talk of a Moore-Patterson fight in one of the big New York ball parks.

Dr. Wenger said he would treat Patterson's hand "conservatively for two weeks and then he will be ready for light boxing." The treatment consists of whirlpool baths, massage and manipulation of the hand to bring the muscles imprisoned in the cast back into full action. Patterson said that after the cast was removed Dr. Wenger "pressed it hard and I felt it but there was no pain."

10-Run Fourth Inning Gives Stockham Legion Junior Title Here

Thoman Stopped By Miller

By John J. Archibald

A much-hammered pitcher and glad of it—that's Stockham Post's Bob Miller, who has decided that swinging a four-pound mallet all day is an effective way of developing a throwing arm. Bob, a summertime construction worker, came back for the third successive night to hold Thoman-Boothe in check as the Overland club, 14 to 4, in the St. Louis area American League junior baseball final last night.

Another fine Fairground Park crowd, estimated at more than 1500, watched the Beaumont and Central High boys of Stockham break open a 4-4 tie with 10 runs in the fourth inning. The game was called at the end of seven innings because of the Legion's 10-run rule. Stockham's victory assures Missouri of a new Legion champion for Coach Bill Schaefer's Thoman-Boothe team from the title last year. Mexico, Mo., is the next battleground for Stockham, which will take on three other Eastern Missouri teams in a two-losses-and-out tournament there July 20, 21 and 22. That winner will represent this half of the state in the finals at Jefferson City.

Becomes a Rout.
The big guns eventually turned the game into a rout for Stockham, but the toughest job of the night was that of Miller. Bob, a slender 16-year-old right-hander, had hurled nine innings Tuesday night and lost although he didn't allow an earned run, then had to come back Wednesday to stop a Thoman rally in the ninth inning with the tying runs on base and none out.

Miller told Stockham Coach Al Grosch that he felt ready, however, so Al reluctantly matched Bob against Thoman's Bill Scerba, making his first start since Saturday. Thoman-Boothe got five hits and four runs off of Miller in the first three innings, although four Stockham errors played a big part in the scoring.

It was Scerba and two mates who followed him on the hill who went on, however, while Miller went on to protect his 20-run lead for four innings—er, until two hours of playing time had elapsed and the game was called. That lot of pitching saved Miller some work, for if Thoman-Boothe had renewed the lead by even a run the game would have gone nine innings.

As to the hammering, no, Miller didn't do any yesterday. He took on the relatively heavy outdoor work in order to develop his muscles for baseball, but he figured it would be better to remain a 170-pound Stockham had several heroes in its victory. Near the top of the list again was Left Fielder Roger Robinson, who had helped save Wednesday's game with a brilliant catch of a line drive with the tying runs on base. In the third inning of last night's contest Robinson came up with one on and the score 4-2 against his team.

"Robby" then belted one of Scerba's fast balls far over the right fielder's head and into a distant street for a game-tying home run. It was Robinson's fourth homer in 13 games for Stockham.

In the fourth, the roof fell on Thoman-Boothe. Reliever Fred Heimerling was in at the start, but after an error put the leadoff man on base, Stockham went on to score 10 runs on seven hits, two walks, a hit batsman, and two fielder's choices that misfired.

Elmer Yordt, the previous night's pitcher, was present during about half of the destruction.

Larry Goudy had three of Stockham's 12 hits. Ollie Sweeney, Jerry Nauri and Robinson each had two. John Meives of Thoman-Boothe had four-for-four.

Larsen and Miss Fry Are Top Seeded for Clay Courts Tourney

CHICAGO, July 13 (UPI)—An Larsen, San Leandro, Calif., and Shirley Fry, St. Petersburg, Fla., winner of the women's championship at Wimbledon, were seeded for play in the national clay court championships.

Bernard Bertram, Dallas, Tex., and New York's Althea Gibson won second seedings in the tourney opening at the River Forest tennis club Tuesday and Ed Noylen, Teutonia, N.J., and Dorothy Head Knobel, Forest Hills, N.Y., were seeded third.

Mario Llamas and Yola Ramirez, both of Mexico City, won top seed in the foreign division.

222-Lb. Olympic Candidate Illinois-Breds In Top Races At Fairmount

EARLENE BROWN of Los Angeles may be part of America's answer to Russia's bid for supremacy in the women's branch of the Olympic track and field games. This 21-year-old mother of a 7-month-old child has broken the American women's discus record and holds the American record for the shotput. She weighs 222 pounds.

Governor Suggests California Schools Form New Conference

LOS ANGELES, July 13 (AP)—A suggestion that the Pacific Coast Conference be dissolved and a California Conference of U.C.L.A., California, Stanford and Southern California be formed for athletic competition has been made by Governor Goodwin J. Knight.

The Governor made the suggestion in a letter to Ned Cronin, Los Angeles Times sports writer, who wrote him for his opinions about the athletic scandals that brought fines and bans against schools and athletes in the P.C.C.

"This whole ivory tower business raises the hackles of my red blooded American neck, and I join with you in the hope we can do something," the chief executive wrote. "I am wondering if it might not be a good plan to consider the forming of a conference, leaving out the two universities in Washington, the two in Oregon and the one in Idaho."

The Governor pointed out that present day booster clubs have been composed of "all the community leaders with whom the professors fraternize and the community leaders from whom they ask university financial support." He said he believed rugby football at Stanford and I can assure you that if some prominent alumnus had approached me with an offer of modest assistance in my tuition or expenses I would have assumed that this prominent alumnus was a man of character and standing in the community and that this proposition had the tacit approval of those in authority."

Governor Knight told Cronin he endorsed his point of distinction that athletes were not being paid to play college football but rather were being aided to obtain an education while they do play football.

"Apparently the University of California at Berkeley is accepting the conference edict without a struggle," said the Governor. "This complicates the situation very badly. And, incidentally, while we are on the subject, the rule that there could not be a 'repeater' in the Rose Bowl, regardless of merit, is, in my considered opinion, unrealistic and unsportsmanlike."

Seeded Berths Will Be at a Premium in National Net Meet

NEW YORK, July 13 (AP)—Seeded berths will be at a premium in the national tennis championships at Forest Hills Aug. 31-Sept. 9.

The United States Lawn Tennis Association announced that no more than eight players, both foreign and domestic, will be seeded in each of the men's and women's singles divisions.

In the past there have been 16 to 24 seeds in the men's class, 12 to 16 in the women's. No reason was given for the change.

STILL KING OF THE MOUNTAIN!

Chevy beats own Pikes Peak record . . . and tops all rivals including cars in every price range!

Last fall, Chevrolet broke the Pikes Peak record in a history-making pre-production test.

Chevrolet takes first, second and four of the top six places! Beats its own stock car record by a full minute and 16 seconds! Again Chevy shows the sure-fire handling qualities and great-hearted performance that make it King of the Mountain—and a safer car to drive on any road.

It happened on July 4. Running against the hottest competition in the land, Chevrolet won the Pikes Peak climb—a towering challenge open to all makes of cars.

This is far more than a blazing demonstration of power. It is unquestionable proof of Chevrolet's supreme roadability—the accuracy of Ball-Race steering; the solidity of outrigger rear springs, the traction "bite" that comes from balanced weight distribution.

There is no greater test of a car's road safety qualities than the Pikes Peak climb. For this reason any make of car would be proud to be King of the Mountain. Come in and drive the car that's won the "crown" twice in a row!

America's largest selling car—2 million more owners than any other make!

1000 Players Enter National Junior

Golf Title Event
NEW YORK, July 13 (UP)—A record 1000 youngsters have entered the U.S. Golf Association's junior amateur championship, executive secretary Joe Dey announced.

Sectional qualifying rounds at 18 holes of medal play will be held at 46 sites around the country to determine the field of 128 who will compete at all-match-play in the tournament proper Aug. 8-11 on the Taconic golf course at Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.

This marked the sixth straight year that entries set a new high. The previous record was 805 golfers last year. A new junior champion will be crowned this year because the 1955 winner, William J. Dunn of Duncan, Okla., has passed the age limit. The tournament is open to golfers who have not reached their eighteenth birthday by mid-night of Aug. 11. Sectional qualifying will take place on July 24 at 42 of the 46 sites. At Chicago the qualifying round will be held July 18, and at San Francisco, Detroit and Columbus, O., it will be played July 23. The largest qualifying field is 71 at Louisville, Ky.

Qualifying rounds at Water-ville, Me., and at St. Louis have been cancelled this year because of insufficient entries.

Muny Junior Tennis Tournay Postponed

The Muny junior tennis tournament, scheduled to start Monday morning at Tower Grove Park, has been postponed until latter part of August. Competition was to be held in the small boys and girls and junior boys and girls' events. Exact date will be announced later.

It was decided to hold the event later due to the conflict of the Junior Davis Cup tryouts scheduled next week at Triple A.

ARMED ROBBER TAKES $100
IN HOLDUP, FLEES ON FOOT

An armed robber took $100 from the Scotchman Tavern, 1845 St. Louis avenue, East St. Louis, last night and fled on foot, police were told.

The bartender, Claude A. Gibbs, told police the robber, a Negro, entered the store shortly before midnight and ordered a bottle of liquor. As Gibbs handed him the bottle, the man drew a revolver and ordered Gibbs to put the money from the cash register in a paper bag.

KIDNAPED BABY
GONE NINE DAYS;
STILL NO CLUE

Each Time Phone Rings
Caller Turns Out to Be Crackpot or Sadistic Joker.

WESTBURY, N. Y., July 13 (AP)—Today is the ninth day since five-week-old Peter Weinberger was kidnaped.

Basically, there is nothing new in the situation.

Each time the telephone rings in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Weinberger, they hope against hope that this time it will be the real kidnaper, with news of their baby and how they can get him back.

With deadly frequency, however, it is some misguided crackpot or sadistic joker who pretends he knows where the child is and cruelly raises the Weinbergers' hopes.

A family spokesman said today the Weinbergers now believe the kidnaper's fear of capture and not the amount of ransom is holding up the return of the baby.

David Holman, an uncle of Mrs. Weinberger, made that comment when asked about reports that the Weinbergers had $25,000 ready to ransom the child.

Apprehension and Fear.

"I don't think it's a case of money now," said Holman. "I'm afraid apprehension and fear on the part of the kidnaper will keep him hiding. If any contract is made now, it will be made indirectly."

Nassau county Chief of Detective Stuyvesant Pinnell disclosed yesterday that the ransom note was signed "Your Baby Sitter." The Weinbergers have never employed a baby sitter, although they have at times hired nurses.

Pinnell disclosed also that none of the dozens of callers so far has used the "Your Baby Sitter" tag to identify himself as the kidnaper. However, it was pointed out that other parts of the note, not yet disclosed, could be used as a positive means of identifying the kidnaper.

Last Friday Weinberger received two calls from a man he was convinced was the kidnaper. There has been no contact since. The caller Friday did not use "Your Baby Sitter" as a code, Pinnell said.

FBI Maintains Silence.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents have been in the case officially for two days. The FBI has maintained its traditional silence about its agents' activities. Pinnell said also his office would give out no more information about the progress of the case.

It was indicated there would be a crackdown on crank callers.

The infant was snatched on the Fourth of July from a baby carriage on a rear patio of the Weinberger home, while Mrs. Weinberger, 35 years old, was in the house for a few minutes.

The ransom note found near the carriage demanded $2000, and threatened death for the baby if the police were called in.

The caller last Friday, who convinced the father he was the kidnaper, upped the ransom demand to $5000, but gave no instructions as to how to pay it.

Still the Weinbergers wait.

DRUNKEN DRIVING CHARGE DISMISSED BY MAGISTRATE

A charge of driving when intoxicated against Gilman E. Day, who was sentenced last April 5 to a year in the county jail and fined $500, was dismissed yesterday by Magistrate Leslie T. Lewis in a preliminary hearing at Clayton.

Day, of Indianapolis, a former Marine stationed at Lambert-St. Louis Field, was arrested April 2 by state troopers after his truck struck and killed Mrs. Myrtle T. Hadnot of Kinloch at Natural Bridge road east of Lindbergh boulevard. He was released April 9 by Circuit Judge Michael J. Carroll, who ruled the original information was faulty.

At the hearing yesterday, testimony showed that Day, 20 years old, was out of the machine when arrested. A service station operator testified he heard a thud and saw a woman's body lying in the road, but did not see who hit her.

HECKER (ILL.) MAN REPORTS
TWO ROBBED HIM OF $200

Alfred Hopp, a farmer of Hecker, Ill., reported to police he was robbed of $200 yesterday by two men who attacked him in the 1500 block of North Jefferson avenue.

Hopp said he was walking to his automobile from a store when one of the men, Negroes, grabbed him around the neck from the rear and threw him to the ground while the other took his wallet. Hopp said he pursued the men for about a block but lost them in the 2600 block of Howard street.

BRANDS REPORT ON BLACKLISTING POLITICAL TRACT

Witness Tells House Group Fund for Republic Document Uses Red Jargon.

WASHINGTON, July 13 (AP)—A report on "blacklisting" in the entertainment industry was described today as "a partisan and political tract" using "jargon of the Communist party" in testimony before the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

The report, a two-volume study sponsored by the Fund for the Republic, underwent a long criticism by Paul R. Milton, New York radio writer and an official of Aware, Inc., and Godfrey P. Schmidt, New York attorney and president of Aware.

Aware is a private organization formed for the announced purpose of fighting Communism in the entertainment field.

Chairman Francis E. Walter (Dem., Pennsylvania), announced the committee has issued subpoenas for some persons named in the Fund's report, to tell "where and how they were blacklisted and discriminated against."

Walter has disputed any contention that a "blacklist" exists. He has called the report "partisan and prejudiced" in favor of Communists and fellow travelers.

Three Actors Called.
Walter told reporters the committee has issued subpoenas for three actors. He identified one as Gale Sondergaard, now appearing on the stage in Philadelphia. He said the committee will hear her at sessions set for Philadelphia next week. Miss Sondergaard was one of those discussed in the report.

Walter said she has been "named by half a dozen people before the Committee on Un-American Activities as a member of the Communist party."

Speaking last night to the Pennsylvania V.F.W. meeting in Philadelphia, Walter said the report "makes an indictment of everyone who has been active in opposing the employment of Communists and Communist sympathizers in the entertainment industry."

Walter said his committee has found that "a number of persons who have co-operated loyally in exposing the Communist conspiracy" have been denied work, and he added: "It is peculiar that the report deals at great length with the rights of Communists but never with the rights of loyal patriotic citizens."

'Complete Falsification.'
Roy M. Brewer, former international representative of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees in the movie industry, told the committee yesterday that parts of the report are a "complete falsification."

Brewer, now an official of Allied Artists Pictures Corp., New York City, said blacklisting does not exist in the sense of an "illegal, improper, sinister activity" as he said the report implied.

Brewer said the report "ignores the basic problem confronting the motion picture industry. The problem of Communist infiltration in the industry, which the Fund prefers to brush off."

NEWSPAPER GUILD ORDERS REVISION OF WAGE GOALS

TORONTO, July 13 (AP)—The American Newspaper Guild instructed its international executive board yesterday to begin an immediate study leading to an upward revision of minimum wage goals.

The recommendation was contained in the report of the collective bargaining committee adopted by the annual convention.

Present minimum goals are $150 a week for experienced editorial, advertising, circulation and business classification employees.

The committee report said "considerable emphasis should be given the possibility that the whole problem of starting minimums be considered in this revision."

The executive board also was instructed to study the possibility of spending up to $50,000 of the Guild's defense fund to buy newspaper to be used for publication of union newspapers in the event of strikes.

OWNER FINED FOR REFUSAL TO VACATE UNSAFE BUILDING

Walter H. Smith, owner of a frame dwelling at 1413 Bremen avenue, was fined $1000 yesterday for failure to correct hazardous conditions at his home and refusal to vacate a building condemned as unsafe. He indicated he would appeal.

Provisional Police Judge Carl Lang convicted him of violating building regulations after city inspectors testified that the dwelling was in danger of collapse, plastering was loose and repeated notices had gone unheeded.

STUDENTS RIOT IN HONDURAS

TEGUCIGALPA, July 13 (AP)—Police used tear gas and clubs yesterday to disperse rioting Honduran students armed with slingshots and rocks.

The striking students have been demonstrating against government policies and demanding the ouster of their rector. The government has charged that opposition political forces and Communist infiltrators were behind the strike in an effort to overthrow chief of state Julio Lozano Diaz.

REDS TO SEEK U.N. ACTION IN NEW AIR VIOLATIONS

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., July 13—The Soviet Union warned yesterday that it would turn to the United Nations Security Council if United States aircraft should repeat alleged violations of Soviet air space.

Arkady A. Sobolev, Soviet ambassador to the United Nations, transmitted a letter to Joseph Nisot of Belgium, this month's president of the Security Council.

He attached to his letter a copy of the Soviet note to the State Department protesting against the alleged American intrusions. "The Air Force denied the charges Wednesday."

Sobolev did not ask for a meeting of the Security Council, but he warned that Russia would call such a meeting if violations of Soviet territory would be repeated by the United States.

He attached to his letter a copy of the Soviet note to the State Department protesting against the alleged American intrusions. "The Air Force denied the charges Wednesday."

THREE ARRESTED IN RAID BY POLICE GAMBLING SQUAD

Members of the police gambling squad raided an alleged handbook in a cigar store at 109 North Eighteenth street yesterday and arrested three men, including one officer identified as the owner, Albert L. Lock, who gave his address as 3909 Utah street.

Lock and Charles W. Hall, who told police he worked part time at the store, were booked suspected of setting up and keeping a common gambling house. Hall gave an address of 107 North Eighteenth street. Police, who have had the store under surveillance for several weeks, seized a number of betting tabs, scratch sheets and racing forms.

Also arrested and booked for investigation was Louis H. By-rom of Pacific, Mo. He told police he had stopped in the store to buy a soft drink, but was found to have a racing form in his possession. Byrom, a baggage clerk on a Missouri Pacific commuter train, was charged with feloniously recording and registering a bet in form in his possession. Byrom, a warrant issued last March 5.

Would YOU Like Labor Peace Plus An Annual Raise for Five Years?

That Is What the Steelworkers were Offered by Their Companies-Plus Protection Against Increased Living Costs

Steel mills throughout the country have been closed down by a strike called at midnight, June 30, by union leaders. Each week the striking steelworkers are losing more than $50,000,000 in wages. The country is losing about 2,000,000 tons weekly in steel production.

This strike was in the face of a package offer by steel companies which would give employees and their families a bigger increase in actual buying power the next five years than they have had over any consecutive five-year period. It included the following proposals:

- 1 Increases in hourly wage rates every year for five years, ranging from 6 cents to 12 cents, and averaging 7.3 cents for each of the years.
- 2 A cost-of-living adjustment to protect the wages of employees against the effect of rising prices.
- 3 A supplemental unemployment benefit plan for employees with three years or more of service to help tide them over periods of layoff up to 52 weeks.
- 4 Many other fringe benefits including improvements in insurance and pensions, holidays and vacations.

5 A contract providing progress, stability and labor peace for five years.

Those increases would cost the companies 17½ cents more per employee hour worked in the first year and by the fifth year the increases would reach a total cost of 65 cents per hour more than at present. Any cost-of-living adjustment would be in addition to these costs.

This amounts to a total cost increase of $2½ billions over the five-year period.

The steelworker is already among the highest paid industrial workers in the entire nation. His wages alone have recently averaged $100 a week, or $20 a week above the average in all manufacturing industries.

The companies were deeply hopeful that by making this offer early in the negotiations, a strike could be avoided.

But at the same time the companies are keenly conscious of their public obligation to retard—as much as is within the power of any one industry—a new inflationary spiral.

This could be accomplished by spreading increased wage costs in the industry over a long-term, no-strike contract.

Would not the best interests of steelworkers, the industry, and the country be served by acceptance of this offer?

NASSER, TITO BEGIN TALKS IN YUGOSLAVIA

Marshal's Visit to Moscow, Situation in Middle East, Africa Likely to Be Discussed.

BELGRADE, July 13 (AP)—Egypt's President Gamal Abdel Nasser and President Josip (Tito) Broz today began a series of talks on a wide range of problems of common interest to their two nations.

It was believed Tito would give his visitor a thorough briefing on his talks with Communist party boss Nikita S. Khrushchev and Premier Bulganin during Tito's recent visit to Moscow.

The two leaders also were expected to discuss the situation in the Middle East and in North Africa. They may also touch on the Cyprus problem and skin over such broader issues as German unification, disarmament and general East-West relations.

Prior to his meeting with Tito, President Nasser received the "freedom of the city of Belgrade" inscribed on parchment and symbolically sealed with the Belgrade coat of arms. Nasser arrived yesterday for an eight-day visit to repay Tito's visit to Egypt last December. Tito and Nasser will meet India's Prime Minister Nehru at the Adriatic island of Brioni July 19 for joint talks.

Nehru Arrives in West Germany, Gets Big Welcome.
BONN, July 13 (AP)—Prime Minister Nehru of India arrived for a four-day visit to West Germany today. A huge crowd gave him a thunderous welcome at the airport.

Nehru is on his way home from the British Commonwealth conference in London. He goes next to Paris, then to Yugoslavia to confer with President Josip (Tito) Broz and President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt, and then to Cairo and Beirut. While here the Indian leader will confer with Chancellor Adenauer and President Theodor Heuss and will receive an honorary degree from Hamburg University.

The Bonn Foreign Office considers Nehru's visit unusually important because of his position as head of a huge nation which considers itself neutral in the conflict between the West and the Communist world. Greeting Nehru, Adenauer told him "You are highly esteemed by the German people and heartily welcomed by them."

Turning to the President's information proposal, the newspaper said:

"For example, they called for the opening of 'information centers' in the respective capitals. But we well remember what kind of 'information' was gathered by similar centers which in their time existed in certain East European countries. To all intents and purposes these centers were spy nests."

The suggestion about changes in the exchange rate of rubles for tourists was denounced as "immoderate demand to change the administrative and financial policy of the U.S.S.R." The Soviets insist their ruble is worth 25 cents. This makes tourism quite expensive for Americans.

Pravda saw a connection between the President's proposal and a vote in the Senate to appropriate $25,000,000 to help refugees from behind the Iron Curtain. It said the appropriation was "for financing spies and murderers in the socialist countries."

MOTION FILED TO REASSIGN CAUDLE, CONNELLY CASE
A motion for reassignment to another court of the cases of T. Lamar Caudle and Matthew J. Connelly was filed in United States District Court yesterday by United States Attorney Harry Richards.

The motion formally called the court's attention to the death last Saturday of United States District Judge Ruben M. Hulen, who presided at the Caudle-Connelly trial. Judge Hulen, who died of a gunshot wound, had set July 19 as the date for sentencing the two former officials in the Truman Administration. They were convicted June 14 of conspiracy to defraud the Government.

Judge Hulen's criminal docket was taken over today by United States District Judge George H. Moore, who heard nine cases in addition to one on his own docket.

JOHN M. BOGDANOR QUILTS AS SEWER DISTRICT TRUSTEE
The resignation of John M. Bogdanor as a trustee of the Metropolitan St. Louis Sewer District was announced today by County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews, who said he had appointed J. Edward Gragg, attorney, to replace him.

Bogdanor, vice president of the Schuermann Building & Realty Co., said he resigned for business reasons. He was one of the original trustees, having been appointed, in 1954. The next year he served as chairman.

Gragg's appointment is subject to approval by the circuit judges in the county. He was an unsuccessful candidate for mayor of St. Louis, running against the late Mayor Joseph M. Darst. Gragg is a Republican.

MAN'S 'FREE RIDE' IN SQUAD CAR HAS FINAL TAB OF $150

Richard Ford, who acknowledged he falsely reported a shooting yesterday in order to get a "free ride to see my girl friend" in a squad car, learned today the fare for such service comes high.

Ford, a Negro, of the 4200 block of Finney avenue, was fined $150 by Police Judge Robert G. Dowd, who found the defendant guilty of making a false report of a law violation. When Ford stopped a police car yesterday at Kingshighway near Barnes Hospital, he said he wished to give officers at the Page boulevard station some information about a shooting.

Once at the station, however, he said he had no facts about the shooting but just wanted to see a woman living nearby. It didn't do Ford much good in court today when he came up with a third explanation—that he wanted to tell police about someone who had struck him.

BABY FALLS TO DEATH FROM SECOND FLOOR

From Porch to Brick Driveway.

Donna Lee Moresi, 19-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Moresi 14614 Arlington avenue, suffered a fatal head injury last night when she fell 20 feet from a second-floor porch at her home to a brick driveway.

The child was in the living room with her father and wandered out to the porch when he left the room for a brief period, relatives said.

Donna Lee apparently climbed up on a chair to reach the porch railing.

BOONVILLE WOMAN IN CAMPAIGN POST

Mrs. L. C. Davis Named
Co-Chairman of State
Eisenhower Group.

Mrs. L. C. Davis of Boonville, former vice chairman of the Republican State Committee, has been named co-chairman of the Missouri Citizens-for-Eisenhower Committee, it was announced yesterday.

The announcement was made in New York by Mrs. Dorothy D. Houghton, co-chairman of the National Citizens-for-Eisenhower Organization. Mrs. Davis will serve with Maurice E. Mendle, St. Louis county party leader, who was named state chairman last week.

Elroy W. Bromwich, Republican national committeeman for Missouri, who protested the selection of Mendle, declined to comment on the appointment of Mrs. Davis. He said, however, that his original position in regard to the citizens committee "has not changed, and it will not."

Bromwich and other Republican leaders contended that the Missouri Citizens-for-Eisenhower group should be headed by persons not closely identified with party activities and factional disputes, because it is primarily concerned with a non-partisan campaign to win support of independent and Democratic voters for the re-election of President Eisenhower.

Mrs. Davis, a charter member and former president of the Boonville League of Women Voters, headed the Missouri Women's Division of the Citizens-for-Eisenhower in 1952. She was official Missouri hostess at the national Citizens-for-Eisenhower headquarters in Chicago during the Republican national convention four years ago.

Mrs. Davis resigned as vice chairman of the state G.O.P. committee in 1954 to run for Congress. She was defeated in the general election.

AIRLINE PROPOSALS GIVEN CITY SUPPORT

Statement Filed With C.A.B.
Favors Service Plans to Des Moines.

A statement supporting proposals which would give non-stop St. Louis-Des Moines airline service to Braniff International Airways and local service to Ozark Air Lines, Inc., was filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday by the City of St. Louis and Chamber of Commerce.

The city and chamber are supporting an application of Ozark Air Lines for local service between St. Louis and Omaha by way of Hannibal, Mo., and Quincy, Ill. The airline's request to provide service between St. Louis and Sioux City, Ia., by way of Hannibal-Quincy, Ottumwa, Ia., Des Moines and Fort Dodge, Ia., is also being supported.

Braniff International Airways is seeking authority from the CAB to abandon flights between St. Louis, Hannibal-Quincy, Ottumwa and Fort Dodge and to retain the St. Louis-Des Moines flight non-stop.

The applications will be considered at a hearing before a CAB examiner beginning July 17 at Omaha. The examiner will investigate the need for additional local air carrier service between cities in Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wisconsin and contiguous territory, including St. Louis.

North Central Airlines is also seeking to provide service between St. Louis and Sioux City similar to that proposed by Ozark.

Representatives of Braniff, TWA, Delta and Eastern airlines were scheduled to meet today with Chamber of Commerce representatives to explain proposals pending before the CAB which would give St. Louis better air passenger service.

National Airlines declined an invitation to attend the meeting, called to assist the Chamber of Commerce in formulating its policy.

G.O.P. SOLICITS FUNDS FROM ITS APPOINTEES, TEXAN SAYS

HOUSTON, Tex., July 12 (AP)—H. J. (Jack) Porter, Republican national committeeman from Texas, said today all persons appointed to federal positions by the Eisenhower Administration were being solicited for campaign funds.

The Houston oilman added, however, no "pressure tactics" are being used.

The Washington bureau of the Houston Chronicle reported today that a Senate subcommittee is planning hearings here.

A Senate investigation began last October after Senator Olin Johnson (Dem.), South Carolina, charged that postal jobs in Texas were being sold to the "highest bidder."

BAR OWNER AND CUSTOMER ROBBED OF $248 IN HOLDUP

Arthur Wardrop, operator of a tavern at 2800 Natural Bridge avenue, and a customer were robbed of more than $248 in a holdup early today, police reported.

Wardrop said a man with a nickel-plated revolver obtained $180 from his wallet and an undetermined amount from the cash register. The robber took $68 from Jewell Sellings, 2620A North Broadway, after searching two other customers but getting nothing, police were told.

STOCKS RECOVER AND EXTEND UPTURN LATE

Steels, Coppers and Selected Issues Set Market's Course.

NEW YORK, July 13 (AP)—The stock market rebounded from yesterday's decline with a smart advance today. Coppers, steels and selected issues were in the forefront.

Leading issues improved from fractions to around 4 points in fairly quiet trading.

The market was irregular at the beginning but started upward by the end of the first hour. The rise was gradual until late in the afternoon when steels and coppers widened their earlier gains to make prices at the close their best of the day.

Of 139 issues traded there were 602 advances and 208 declines. There were 52 new highs for the year and 10 new lows.

Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was 3.66 points higher at 511.10 at the close. The 20 rails gained .90 of a point at 168.02 and the 15 steel rose .17 to a new 1956 high of 69.35.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks rose $1.30 to 187.80 with the industrials up $2.40, the rails up 70 cents and the utilities up 30 cents.

Volume for the day totaled 2,020,000 shares compared with 2,180,000 yesterday.

London stocks were higher today, the Financial Times index gaining 12 points at 179.1.

United Press said that "Square D ran up more than 4 points on a stock split."

Coppers, which were ahead even in yesterday's lower market, continued gaining today as the industry's price situation became more stabilized.

Kennecott, the nation's biggest producer, climbed around 3 points, Anaconda and American Smelting rose a point or better.

The steels went ahead despite failure of negotiators to break the strike deadlock. Bethlehem advanced around 2 points, U. S. Steel a point, Youngstown and Republic Steel major fractions.

A miscellaneous sampling made rose more than a point, Eastman Kodak 2 points, Du Pont 3 points, Illinois Central and Loew's a point or more.

Motors showed little change. Aircrafts were steady. Oil improved fractionally and airlines were mixed.

Odd Lot Transactions.

NEW YORK, July 13 (AP)—The New York Stock Exchange reported today that odd lot transactions by principal dealers on the exchange for July 12. Purchases of 236,138 shares; sales of 194,193 shares including 1479 shares sold short.

WHEAT PRICE RISES, CORN MARKET SOLD

to Further Southwest Moisture.

CHICAGO, July 13 (AP)—Wheat and rye scored gains ranging to a few cents while other grains got nowhere on the Board of Trade today. Rye was firm from the start but wheat didn't begin to perk up until the afternoon. Hedging pressure was light as rains delayed harvesting on small acreage which still remains to be harvested in the Midwest. Corn retreated under light but steady selling as the Midwest moisture further improved crop prospects. Oats were mixed while July soybeans sold down a few cents most of the day.

Three-Way Refueling

Speeding along to another aerial milestone, three F-100 Super Sabre jet fighters are refueled simultaneously by a KB-50 tanker in test at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. Operation requires high level of skill on all sides as the speedy fighters are maneuvered into position to take on fuel from lines trailing from mother craft. The Air Force reported it was the first time such an operation had been successful.

Henry Fonda Explains

Why So Many Actors Are Hypochondriacs

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK, July 13 (AP).

THERE is a saying that, except for doctors, actors are among the world's worst hypochondriacs. It is easy to see how a doctor, surrounded all day by poor health, can become a hypochondriac. Let him get even a degree of fever, and he can suspect a thousand things that may be wrong with him? But why actors?

"It's the tension they live under," said Henry Fonda. "The theater is exacting. The necessity of making eight performances a week—month after month if you've got a hit play—gets you to worrying about your health."

"Even a sneeze will start you to brooding. Gradually, against your own better judgment, you turn into a kind of hypochondriac."

Fonda himself, however, seems to have the durability of a draft horse. He played "Mister Roberts" on Broadway more than 1000 times without missing a performance.

After appearing in more than 60 films and dozens of plays, Fonda has joined the growing ranks of stars who have formed their own companies to produce their own pictures.

HE IS REFRESHINGLY FRANK about why he finally turned producer.

"It's about the only way you can make any money and save it," he said. "You pay regular income tax on your salary. But on the profits of a picture you make as head of your own company you have to pay only a corporation tax. There's a big difference."

Fonda is president of Orion Productions, a title he picked merely because he didn't want to use his own name.

His first venture will be certainly modest from a financial standpoint. He is starring in a screen adaptation of Reginald Rose's television play, "Twelve Angry Men," a psychological study of an all-male jury trying a slum kid for murder.

THE FILM is being shot in a West Fifty-fourth street studio here on a budget of $370,000—an amount Cecil B. DeMille might spend on a single scene in one of his high-priced spectacles.

So far Fonda says he hasn't found much difficulty adjusting to his dual role as producer-actor.

"In both jobs you have the same problem—trying to find something that excites you and you want to do," he said.

"Eventually, if I go on, however, I'll need someone to take over some of the producing problems which I won't have time to handle."

FONDA, who came from the Nebraska prairies, wanted to be a newspaper man but couldn't find a job in that field. He worked as a physical training instructor, ice man, window dresser, garage mechanic and clerk before he became an actor.

Now ranked with Fredric March as one of the most versatile men in his profession, he is deeply serious about acting. The tribute he draws most often from other actors is this: "The guy has integrity."

Critics often have remarked that, like his friend, Jimmy Stewart, he has the ability to look effortless. "It shouldn't look like acting. But if it actually is effortless, there is something wrong somewhere. It's hard work. If you're worth your salt as an actor, you can't let yourself get mechanized, no matter how many times you play the same role."

FONDA isn't as afraid of losing fame as he is of "not being good."

"Every actor, I would think," he said quietly, "has it—the fear of not being adequate."

Fonda relaxes by drawing. He uses colored pastel crayons instead of oil paints.

"That's what the kids leave around the house," he explained.

Don't Force Food

By Angelo Patri

WE ARE told by persons who have made such study their life work that children should have a varied diet. They need vegetables, meat and milk. Most children agree, but what is one to do about the odd one who refuses one or more of these basic foods? There are such children. One refuses vegetables; another refuses milk; one will eat nothing but beef. Spoiled? If they are, nobody knows how that comes about, for they all are offered the usual foods at the usual stages of their growth.

Forcing other foods down their throats results in an upheaval. Now it does seem necessary to eat a varied diet for sound health, but if a child won't or can't eat that way, we must try to find the reason and do the best we can to get the child to take the food he needs.

THE CHILD specialist should be consulted. Children have food allergies of one sort or another, and it might be that this child who will not eat as others do has an allergy. The physician can tell, and he can help the mother to get the child to eat as he should.

We have to remember that all grown persons have likes and dislikes for foods. There are few who can enjoy every sort of food. Habit has a great deal to do with this in grown-up persons, but the children have not as yet formed any such habits.

Add new foods to a child's diet in very small portions, beginning with a tiny bit on the tip of the spoon and gradually increasing the amount until it reaches proper volume. Let the grown persons show pleasure in eating this new food while making no show of effort to have the child eat it.

ONE FATHER and mother have a fine way of introducing a new food into the child's diet. They talk about the idea of offering it to the child.

"I wonder if he is old enough to be allowed to have any?"

"Well, I don't know. He is a bit young yet."

"Maybe a little bit, just a bite? I don't think it will hurt him. He's quite a big boy now."

By this time the youngster is bursting his jacket for the privilege of tasting this new dish that his elders enjoy and which they are slow to offer him. This works well for the older ones but, of course, the very young ones could not be expected to understand. Keep offering the essential food, in very small tastes. Rest for a few days, then try again. And consult the physician. But don't force any food, any time.

NEW YORK, July 13. DETERMINED that the fashionable woman of this autumn will look like the portrait of a lady, the designers are handling her wardrobe with gentle hands.

Clothes shown this week at the semi-annual presentation of the couture group of the New York Dress Institute treat fabrics, colors, and even the silhouettes as if they were precious jewels. Fragile beauty is the trend for the new season and it finds expression in softly manipulated drapery, pastel hues that are reminiscent of the mauve decade, fabrics that are supple to the touch, and a comfortable emphasis to the fitting of garments.

Easy is the adjective that has been used most often by the commentators to describe the fashions as model after model has passed in review in a glamorous panorama. There is an easy grace to the movements of skirt hemlines, to the cutting of deeper armholes, and to the arrangement of sashes that mark either the high or normally placed waistline. Jackets and coats have an easy way of slipping on the shoulders. The bigger hats fit the head in an easy manner. In fact everything about the new fashions may be termed "easy" except the money to pay for them.

This relaxed and "take it easy" emphasis which the designers have given to the shoulders also attains the desired blousy effect. Costumes with little jackets are outstanding among the autumn types that St. Louis women will find wearable and flattering. Practically all of the collections include these jacket ensembles. Herbert Sondheim has "top secret" costumes with short fitted jackets, easy flared skirts and matching tucked silk chiffon blouses. Samuel Winston has some stunning examples in subtle hues. One gray flannel suit with a skirt moderately wide has a bodice of taupe-colored chiffon and a very brief, cutaway jacket of this same taupe tone. Rodier woollens and Paisley patterned hand loomed tweeds are among other materials used for these suits. Satin and velvet are allied with chiffon for late-day suits. The cafe or restaurant dress also adds its jackets or its sweater top. Chiffon and cashmere are blended in these costumes.

Ben Zuckerman, who is noted for his beautiful suits and coats that have ample fullness but restrained lines, introduces a miniature jacket that fits with the popular gentle curves. His coats stress the vogue of bloused or panel backs. Fullness here, as in other leading collections, is arranged at the shoulders in a modified wide box-pleated effect. The coat with back yoke having gathered fullness below it recurs throughout the showings.

While the majority of the coats are full length to cover the hemline of a dress, some shorter coats look new and practical. Davidow features the finger-tip length car coat. He also indorses a striking back-dipping collar that lifts into a hood and should be popular with sports car enthusiasts. The car coat in the Wrasche collection becomes a "livery" coat in deference to the carriage days. Capes and cape coats have returned to fashion. Anthony Blotta has a Don Juan coat that is part cape. It has a tailored shoulder line, and flat cape panels taking the place of sleeves. A reversible Trigrere coat has arresting cape-like sleeves. Many of this designer's coats have very large, low-placed buttons. Her caleche hoods that are attached to several coats are made of jeweled velvet and are indicative of the elaborate accents of the new wraps.

THE siren stoles created by William Fox are interesting accessories that will make conversation. They are worn. Made of chiffon or jersey they are banded with black fox. Seaguard Ascot ties accompanying the Winston suits and fur muffs with convertible jackets designed by Trigrere are other novel accents that will add spice to winter wardrobes. play, "My Fair Lady," which has served as the inspiration for many of the fashions and is generally credited with the lady-like look, has brought some concern about skirt lengths. Rumor had it that Cecil Beaton's designs with their elaborate drapery and tunic ideas would prompt a lowering of skirt lengths. However, day-time types have remained approximately the same length in most collections.

There is a definite trend toward floor length dinner and evening dresses. Also significant is a mid-calf length for late day which Beaton has stressed in a special group of 12 designs made for Samuel Winston and exhibited for the first time this week. The Beaton styles feature charmingly laces what they have learned, according to studies made by Dr. Jack Botwinick. For example, an older person must learn to drive an automatic shift automobile. He can do it, but it takes time to "unlearn" shifting gears. Every living creature gets slower as he grows older. Dr. Botwinick says that jobs requiring speed and unlearning are not suitable for older persons. Those requiring accuracy and repetitive processes are work which they will do well.

1. DO BEIFES AND GEOMS EXPECT TO PLAY CERTAIN ROLES IN MARRIAGE?

YES ☐ NO ☐

Answer to Question 1. YES, for themselves and each other. Husband may expect to play a stellar role in rearing the children. If wife expects the same role, the result is conflict. Husband may expect a lead role in spending money. Wife expects at least a supporting part. Again—unhappiness. Husband may not expect to wash dishes. Wife expects help—result: Flying saucers. If roles are realized, happiness; if unrealized, unhappiness. These conclusions come from a research by psychologist Robert S. Ort.

Answer to Question 2. Reading about children is a good idea, says Dr. James L. Hymes Jr.—facts about their growth, etc.—but sometimes we depend too much on books. You have to read your children as well as the books. Their expressions, gestures, tension of their bodies and cries are all parts of the language of behavior—a subtle language but a real one. It can give you leads, cues, hints and hunches that help you build the warm relationship you want, ease the strain of growing up, and build for a future on a comfortable base.

Answer to Question 3. True. It is not learning new things so much as unlearning

The Question Of Turning Down Drink

By Elinor Williams

SEVENTEEN-YEAR-OLD girl has asked how to keep her friends and dates and yet refuse to drink when she is with them.

It's a problem that faces many of the high school and college crowd. Here's a letter from another reader about it:

"Dear Miss Williams: I am a teen-ager or anybody else who says, 'No, thank you, I don't drink.' Furthermore, I don't think they should order something that looks like a drink to give the impression that they are drinking. They should be proud of the fact that they don't drink and shouldn't want anyone to think otherwise."

"If a girl is fun to be with and good company, no one will care whether she drinks or not. Some boys might respect her enough to give up their own drink when they are in her company."

"There's nothing lady-like or gentleman-like in drinking and it seems to me that this girl's friends would respect her for upholding such high ideals."

"If not, then my advice to her would be to find friends who will—there are plenty of them and she will be much happier."

A Thing of Beauty

I DON'T think a better job of transferring a stage musical to the motion picture screen has ever been done than with the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical play, "THE KING AND I," opening today at the ST. LOUIS THEATER.

The beauty of its Siamese settings and costumes is dazzling and breath-taking. For sheer richness of color and artistry it is easily the most gorgeous movie of the year. And certainly the most charming.

Taking Margaret Landon's novel, "Anna and the King of Siam," Oscar Hammerstein II fashioned his best musical play. It could stand up easily without music and dance as a high comedy of substance, with its piquant wit and its clash of two strong personalities, the willful Siamese despot of 1862, who is primitive, slightly childish, and sometimes quite charmingly human, and Anna Leonowens, a doughty, spirited English gentlewoman hired to teach his many children (the book was based on the actual diary of Mrs. Leonowens).

What brings this battle of personalities into sharp focus is the positively brilliant performance by Yul Brynner as the King and the almost perfect one by Deborah Kerr as Anna. Brynner, who created the role on the stage and played it for years, is completely triumphant. His shaved and bony pate, piercing eyes and stylized dynamism, as he paces about like a caged leopard, make a memorably vivid characterization. Crafty, and yet often naive, cruel, blustering, childishly stubborn, arrogant and stormy, he is vital, magnetic and astonishingly real. It is a performance of Academy Award caliber. And Miss Kerr is a woman of stubbornness and pride, too, when her dignity is assailed, but with a warmth, tenderness, gallantry and saving grace of humor. The singing voice, dubbed in for her, though slight, is sweet and expressive and tonally appealing, and the rather simple songs Richard Rodgers wrote for the part are handled quite charmingly.

Rodgers' music doesn't rank as a great score, but it ideally fulfills its purpose of pointing up, embellishing and coloring the play. The tender "Hello, Young Lovers," which Miss Kerr sings as the brave salute to love of a lonely widow, and the wistful "We Kiss in a Shadow," sung by the hopeless lovers, Tuptim and Lun Tha, against a magical background of fountains, are both quite pretty. The whimsical music for the march of the King's children (at last count, he estimates their numbers at 106), the "Getting to Know You," sung by Miss Kerr with the royal pupils, "Whistle a Happy Tune" and "Shall We Dance" are all engaging. "The Small House of Uncle Thomas," the Siamese version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," again has choreography by Jerome Robbins, who created it on the stage. It is a masterpiece of imagination, quaint humor, and a delicate beauty.

Rita Moreno as Tuptim, Carlos Rivas as Lun Tha, Martin Benson as the prime minister and Terry Saunders (who played the role here at the American and at Muny Opera) as Lady Thiang, the chief wife, all turn in appropriate performances. But the great thing about this film is its visual loveliness in a crystal clear CinemaScope 55 photography and eye-filling DeLuxe color—it is sheer enchantment.

Explaining Teen-Age Toughs

Latest in the run of pictures about disturbed, delinquent, or just plain tough and nasty teen-agers is "CRIME IN THE STREETS," at the FOX, written by Reginald Rose from a television play. Done on a smaller scale than the others, it is more sincere as it tries to probe into the reasons for such problem youths, as it centers on three members of a gang of Dead-End youths in a tenement district who plot to murder a neighbor who had called copper on one of their number.

As are so many plays on social subjects, this one is glib in pointing out the reasons for the problem, but fuzzy as to the solution. James Whitmore, as a patient social worker who makes a nuisance of himself with the gang by trying to be buddies with them, explains that dire poverty, lack of love and understanding cause kids like the three young hoodlums. You mustn't discipline them harshly, you must try to understand them, he says. He doesn't explain what good understanding them will do for a man being brutally assaulted by thugs in an alley, or comment on why many stalwart citizens have come from just such surroundings. But the author has a pat enough dramatic ending, if not a solution—the leader of the gang, with a knife at his victim's throat, is deterred by his little brother, and breaks down and is presumably a better ruffian from then on because, after snarling at his mother, sneering at the social worker, and cuffing the brother for four-fifths of the film, he suddenly realizes the little fellow loves him.

The case examination is weakened by the fact that the leader (played by John Cassavetes from TV) is obviously in need of psychiatric treatment, one confederate (Mark Rydell) is a slobbering moron, and the second (Sal Mineo) has been given all the love from his good family the social worker recommends, but is still surly and rebellious.

Prizefighting Padre

Paramount, having long ago created a memorable comedy humanizing Catholic priests in "Going My Way," tries to catch up on a like salute to Episcopalian clergymen in "THE LEATHER SAINT," opening tonight at the PAG-EANT. But the results are comparatively unimpressive.

The movie, in sharp VistaVision black and white photography, is well-enough acted, but it is such unadulterated hoke that if the customers are observed having quivering larynxes, it is not because they are unduly moved by the pathos of it all, but because they are having a hard time swallowing it. The plot, although it didn't stem from Damon Runyon, sounds as if it did, minus the stylized Runyon humor and played straight.

John Derek, as an Episcopalian priest who has taken a vow of celibacy for a year, attracts the attention of a fight manager (Paul Douglas) with his bag-punching in a gym. Not knowing Derek is a priest, Douglas suggests he become a prize-fighter. Hard up for money for a polo hospital for children which his church is running, John finally agrees and becomes a Saturday night prize-fighter, knocking out each of five opponents in a row with a terrific right cross. An alcoholic night-club songstress (Jody Lawrence) has lecherous designs on the muscular John, but, on discovering he is a priest, she reforms in a twinkling, drinks nothing but water from then on, and persuades her hard-boiled and avaricious protector, Fight Promoter Cesar Romero, to part with $10,000 for the priest's polo project. Please omit "Hearts and Flowers."

A YOUNG girl writes me as follows: "I am 14 years of age and have several pen pals who write to me frequently. If I am not at home when these letters arrive my mother opens them and reads them. It isn't that I am trying to hide anything (I always tell her the most important facts in the letters anyway) but I think it is wrong for anyone to open another person's mail even though a member of the same family. I would very much appreciate your opinion."

I agree entirely with you. Everyone's letters should be considered private property.

Army Wives Look at Their Lives

Well Traveled Women With Husbands Stationed in St. Louis Area Say They Love the Service

By Clarissa Start

WHEN Lt. Gen. William H. Arnold was a lowly second lieutenant, he and his young bride entertained a general in their quarters. Mrs. Arnold recalls the occasion chiefly for the fact that she cooked the chicken with "the innards in." Last year, the Arnolds attended an international conference, took a nap before a big dinner for John Foster Dulles, overslept, and just managed to scurry through the palace doors before they were closed.

Between these two crises, Mrs. Arnold, wife of the commanding general of the Fifth Army, weathered many a military storm and domestic upheaval, made homes in Jefferson Barracks and in Turkey, recalls dunking diapers out the porthole into the Pacific as she traveled to Hawaii with two babies, and rushing a child to appendectomy, still clutching the bottle of champagne with which she was to christen an Army train.

"When my son was going to study nuclear physics, he had to have Government clearance," she relates, "and he wrote asking me for all his street addresses. I wrote back that we'd moved nine times during the nine months that one of his sisters was on the way. He managed to get his clearance without the addresses."

The former Elizabeth Welsh Mullen of St. Louis, Mrs. Arnold revisited her home town recently, to speak to a luncheon of wives of Army officers in this area. The wives laughed frequently and appreciatively at the experience which paralleled their own and listened attentively to details of protocol which she outlined such as why the senior officer's wife pours coffee, the next ranking wife tea, and what to do when faced with the horrendous problem of seating an ambassador "below the salt."

Life in the Army is no longer as circumscribed as it was in the Arnolds' younger days when officers' wives were not permitted to go stockless and the men had to wear a tuxedo after five o'clock, but many details of formality still prevail. And although she is not as publicized in peace time as in war, the Army wife still leads the same exciting but, at times, exasperating life. She may have the family wardrobe adjusted to the tropics when the scene changes to Alaska. Her husband may be sent to Korea just before the baby is due. She may have to cope with maids in Germany, schools in Japan, or the summer heat in St. Louis. In spite of the headaches and hazards, she loves it. At least, the good Army wife says she does.

MOST wives in this area with "overseas service" have lived in Germany, Japan, or Puerto Rico, and at luncheon meetings, conversation usually centers around, "How did you like it there?" The majority loved it. "We lived in Germany, first in Frankfurt, then Hanau," says Mrs. Robert H. Konk, whose husband Col. Konk is in charge of the Missouri Military District, "and we traveled all over Europe. We'd run over to Belgium or Holland for three days or spend 10 days in Italy or France. Getting to know the customs of the different countries interested me, and although we met princesses and baronesses, meeting just everyday ordinary people from other lands was what I liked best about our life there."

"We went everywhere," says Mrs. Maurice Washburn, wife of a lieutenant colonel in the dental corps, of their station in Germany, "Norway, Denmark, Sweden, Finland, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg, France, Italy, Switzerland, Spain, England, Scotland, Ireland, even Yugoslavia, Trieste, Casablanca and French Morocco. It was wonderful."

Mrs. Robert L. Carlson, wife of Lt. Col. Carlson, senior Army adviser for the reserves, considers Germany their most interesting assignment. They lived at Schwabach Gmuend, a town near Stuttgart famous for beautiful silver, some samples of which she brought back. The Carlsons have an 11-year-old daughter and a college-age son, who graduated from high school in Heidelberg after attending 18 different schools.

Mrs. Eugene Moyers, whose husband, a colonel, is professor of military science and tactics at Rolla, does all her own housework in a two-story Colonial home now, including laundry and cooking for her husband, college son and a student who lives with them. She sometimes thinks back fondly to Darmstadt, Germany, where they were entertained by Princess Margaret of Hess, and lived in "a beautiful home with elaborate plumbing including double wash basins and a foot bath." Also three servants.

Mrs. Thomas A. Knight, wife of a captain, feels that "any place where my husband is stationed is where I like to be," but she, too, loved Germany, brought her German shepherd dog, Buster, back with her.

Whether you're traveling with a dog or a large family, moving time in the Army is a problem. Mrs. William D. Paschall, wife of the retired colonel who formerly headed the Missouri Military District, recently wrote an article titled, "Here We Go Again, Girls," for the Army wives' magazine, U.S. Lady. In it she passed on moving, including Mrs. Eisenhower who confessed her husband was seldom on hand for moving. Most wives have their grim memories of this phase.

"The worst experience I ever had," says Lt. Col. Donald Kjeldsen, who is getting the four children to Japan. The youngest was four months, the oldest eight, and they were all sick on the ship all the way over. I feel since I lived through that, I can live through anything."

The Capt. Marvin L. Nances have moved 16 times in 11 years but fortunately their three children are good travelers. Tokyo "spoiled" her for living elsewhere, Mrs. Nance thinks. Mrs. Charles F. Lawson, wife of a major, also recalls Japan for its good schools for son, Charles Jr., and for its plentiful of household help.

MRS. WILLIAM H. ARNOLD... SHE WEATHERED MANY A MILITARY STORM.

What help does she have in her Richmond Heights home, we inquired. "One girl, one day a week," she said grimly. Household help in Puerto Rico was plentiful, too, but the language barrier was a hazard, recalls Mrs. Elmer Chaffee, whose husband is a lieutenant colonel at the Fifth Army Medical Research Laboratory. The Chaffees and their four children, Dorothy, Jan, Billy and Johnny, lived for three and a half years in Puerto Rico and loved it despite periodic invasions of termites and the fact that all of the children seemed to "catch everything" the first year there. They recall fondly the beaches, historic fortresses, flamboyant trees and bougainvillea, their spacious house built on stilts, and the friendly sociable Army atmosphere.

"There was a custom called Bien Venida Despedida," Mrs. Chaffee says, "which involved giving a party for every family when they arrived and when they left."

In addition, hands greeted new arrivals as their ships docked, and new families had sponsors who saw to it that there were beds, linen and food in the refrigerator their first day.

Lt. Col. and Mrs. Carter L. Hillsbeck also moved from Puerto Rico to St. Louis this year. The Hillsbecks who have three sons, Jim, 17, Jon, or "Butch," 14, and Brian, 11, have made 23 moves in 20 years, including Puerto Rico and Alaska. Mrs. Hillsbeck says she's loved every minute of it.

"Even Alaska?" asked another wife incredulously. "Especially Alaska," she insisted.

TRAVEL is admittedly the big lure of Army life, and two wives at the luncheon, the wife of Lt. Col. Charles W. Carter, who's been at the Barracks 10 years, and Mrs. William F. Brennan, bride of a lieutenant, admit they "can hardly wait to go." The majority of the wives, although they look fondly back on glamorous trips, say convincingly that they like St. Louis.

"St. Louisans are wonderful," Mrs. Kjeldsen said. "They have to be made up for the climate."

"We love it here," says Mrs. Edgar McGown, wife of a captain and mother of two little girls. "Most Army posts are so far from shopping centers and here we have so many wonderful stores."

"We've looked around a long time and finally decided to make St. Louis our permanent home," says Mrs. Edward H. Stevens, wife of a lieutenant colonel. They recently purchased a house in Florissant. Although their four children are grown, the Stevens bought a big house and are looking forward to visits with grandchildren.

Mrs. Ralph Nedau, wife of a chief warrant officer, came from Nuremberg, Germany, but when she went home not long ago, "it seemed like a foreign country," and she could hardly wait to get back to St. Louis. In spite of all their problems, few Army wives long for any other kind of existence.

"It definitely has its problems," says Mrs. Almer Bunch, wife of a warrant officer. For instance, "I followed my husband to Japan when he went there from Korea. Four months after I arrived he was sent back to Korea and I was left alone with two children, the older one with polio."

"But now everything's fine," she added, "and we're looking forward to going to Europe." "The Army wife has to put up with a lot of things," Mrs. Chaffee agrees, "but I wouldn't trade it for any other kind of life."

"To those of us who feel dedicated," says Mrs. Arnold, "the advantages outweigh the disadvantages." However, Mrs. Arnold quotes as her favorite poem one entitled "The Army Wife," which concludes: "There's one fancy medal and all Army men wear it. It's their wives that should have it—that Legion of Merit."

Jealousy Is Valuable If Used Properly

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

THERE is nothing good to be said about jealousy, if you believe Mrs. M.

"I ought to know," she asserts. "I have been the victim of it long enough. It is the meanest, low-down feeling that any man can have, and it is particularly disgusting when the man says, as my husband does, that I ought to be glad he is jealous because it proves he really loves me. How silly can a man get, Dr. Popenoe?"

I am not going to answer your last question, Mrs. M. I have to stand up for my own sex. Women sometimes get out of line, too, in showing jealousy. Many a husband could give you a long story about that.

BUT YOUR HUSBAND is half right, Mrs. M. Jealousy is a valuable and necessary thing, provided it is used properly. The trouble arises when it is wrongly used.

How would you define jealousy? It might be described as an active appreciation of something that one legitimately possesses and is determined to hold on to. Isn't that a valuable quality, Mrs. M.?

The opposite of jealousy, in that case, would be indifference, and I suppose you wouldn't be any better pleased if your husband were completely indifferent to you.

Husbands and wives ought to appreciate each other and desire greatly to maintain the relationship. They ought to be jealous of the success of their marriage, and use every intelligent effort to make it a success. The trouble starts when they use unintelligent efforts.

A man doesn't like the way his wife, in his opinion, flirts with other men. He can nag and hound her, try to prevent her from going out of the house, refuse to let her buy attractive clothes, and generally make her life miserable by his jealousy. That is the destructive manifestation of it, and he certainly won't improve his marriage by such measures.

On the other hand, he can try to strengthen his position by showing his love for her, assuring her of his admiration and trust and enriching her life by the right kind of society and recreation with himself and others. His jealousy, in that event, has been made to work intelligently, and enriched and strengthened the marriage, and it has been a good thing.

Occasional twinges of jealousy will probably strike any serious-minded husband or wife. Make them a signal for redoubling your efforts to be a good partner. You will end up with a stronger marriage than before.

East and West Travel Attracts St. Louisans

By Marilee Chadeayne Martin

MRS. J. PAUL EKBERG JR., 5 Wydown terrace, Clayton, with her two youngest children, Jill and John, has been spending the last few weeks at Ocean City, Md., occupying the summer cottage of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Abram B. Lansing, 709 South Skinner boulevard. Next week Mrs. Ekberg and the children will join Mr. Ekberg in New York, and from there they will go to Riverside, Conn., to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Paul Ekberg, for three weeks. While in Connecticut they also plan to visit Mrs. Ekberg's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nicolaus McCluney, of Short Hills, N.J., who are vacationing at Mason's Island, Mystic, Conn.

Mr. and Mrs. Lansing also plan to visit the McCluneys. They leave next week and will be gone approximately a week.

The Ekbergs' elder daughters, Miss Maria and Susie Ekberg, are spending the summer at Camp Cimarroncita, Ute Park, N.M. Other St. Louis campers are Judy Coburn, daughter of the Richmond C. Coburns; Adele Braun, daughter of Mrs. David D. Walker, and Allison Lewis, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Lewis III, 7632 Westmoreland drive, Clayton.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis will depart the end of the month for Wilderness Trails Ranch near Durango, Colo., for a brief vacation, after which they will go to Cimarroncita to pick up Allison. With her they will spend two weeks at her birthplace, Colorado Springs, Colo.

Mrs. Theodore Mitchell Wall of the Ellington, 4961 Laclede avenue, will depart Sunday for Waynesburg, Pa., to visit her son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Elmer Marx Jr. (Katherine Wall), and their family. She will be accompanied by her eldest grandchild, Michael Marx, who has been here visiting his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Elmer Marx.

In Hawaii is Mrs. Fred Green Carpenter, 416 Woodlawn avenue, Webster Groves, who is visiting her son and daughter-in-law, the David B. Carpenters, and their children.

Mrs. Harriet Barron Lane has returned to her home, 7535 Westmoreland drive, University City, from Victoria, B.C., where she stayed at the Empress Hotel. She went by ship from Seattle, Wash., to Vancouver, accompanied by Mrs. W. P. Rosvall of Bellevue, Wash., formerly of Kirkwood, returning by way of Portland, Ore., where she was the guest of a cousin, William S. Finney, at his home at Hood River overlooking the Columbia river. She came back to St. Louis through Glacier National Park.

Garden Supper Tonight for Miss Cone.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM T. CHAFEE, 6984 Cornell avenue, University City, will give a buffet supper this evening at their home in honor of Miss Carolyn Elizabeth Cone, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Alfred J. Cone, Woods Mill road, Chesterfield. Miss Cone made her debut last Sept. 14 with Miss Judith Schettler and Miss Nancy Vogel at a dance at Glen Echo Country Club.

MISS CONE TO BE GUEST OF HONOR.

only for the buffet table, also to be in the garden, but for the smaller tables, are to be good-luck wands to which are attached Oriental symbols of fish and dragons, with silver and gold spangles. An Oriental meal, to be eaten with chop sticks, will be served. The young women guests are to receive fans as favors.

The following will be guests at "Teahouse of the July Moon": Miss Jan Soest, Miss Barbara Burton, Miss Talbot Leland, Miss Schettler, Miss Mariella Coe, Miss Vogel, Miss Caroline Clarkson, Miss Susan Spoeher, Miss Ann MacCarthy, Andrew Meyer, Roger Hemker, Martin L. Ludington, James Street, Peter Walsh, Bruce Stansbury, Lt. Clark Weymouth, Lt. Gerald Richardson and Mr. and Mrs. Chafee's son, Lt. John Byrd Chafee. Lt. Chafee, who has been stationed with the Marine Corps at Quantico, Va., is home on leave before going to Japan.

Miss Susan Grone to Be July Bride.

AMONG midsummer brides will be Miss Susan Mary Grone, who will be married Saturday morning, July 21, to Joseph Robert McKee. Miss Grone is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Henry Grone, 2513 Boswell avenue, Overland; Mr. McKee is a son of Mrs. Allen W. Finch, a former St. Louisan now living in Caracas, Venezuela, and the late Ned Huntington McKee, Fayette, Mo.

Miss Mary Louise Grone will be maid of honor for her sister, and Mr. McKee's sister, Miss Judy McKee, and Miss Susan Cassidy, a former classmate of the bride-elect at Visitation Academy and St. Louis University, will be bridesmaids. Louis Henry Grone Jr. will serve as best man for Mr. McKee, whose ushers will be his brother, Mark McKee; a cousin, Charles P. Bennett, Flint, Mich.; Frederick Streck, a cousin of the bride-to-be, and Lawrence Kreckeler.

Last Saturday Miss Cassidy gave a luncheon and miscellaneous shower at her home, 10928 Clayton road, and the same evening Mr. McKee gave a stag party at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Mary Swartley, 53 West Sherwood drive, Overland. Another shower is planned for the bride to be given Sunday afternoon by her cousin, Mrs. Thomas F. Gammon, at the Gatesworth Hotel. Mr. Kreckeler will be host at a dinner dance at the Bath and Tennis Club tomorrow night, and next Wednesday Miss Mary Louise Grone will be hostess at a spinster dinner at the Grone home. Mr. and Mrs. Finch and her children, Miss Judy and Mark McKee, arrived here yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Finch will give the rehearsal dinner at the home of Mrs. Swartley.

Ida-Mae Spieldoch Is Summer Bride

MISS IDA-MAE SPIELDOCH, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Spieldoch, 7301 Kingsbury boulevard, University City, became the bride of Ralph A. Herzmark July 1 in the Gourmet room at the Park Plaza Hotel. Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isersman performed the ceremony.

Attendants preceding the bride down a huckleberry-lined aisle were Mrs. Lee M. Liberman, matron of honor, and Mrs. Harry R. Horvitz, Cleveland; Mrs. Alvin Herzmark, Ardmore, Okla., the bridegroom's sister-in-law, and Mrs. Neill P. Campbell, bridesmaids. They wore summery blue organdy embroidered in blue and white and had matching velvet bandeaux in their hair. They carried chrysanthemums, larkspur and ivy. The bride was in white embroidered organdy which had a three-tiered skirt and short train. A monocle lace formed a cap to hold her shoulder veil. She carried lilies of the valley centered with white orchids.

Mr. Herzmark, son of Frank I. Herzmark of Ardmore, Okla., and the late Mrs. Herzmark, had his brother, Alvin, as best man. Ushers included a cousin, Leonard Herzmark, Kansas City, Mo.; Marc Birge, Robert Mazer, Chicago; Gilbert Spieldoch Jr. and Harold I. Sachs, the bride's brother-in-law.

The former Miss Spieldoch attended the University of Mexico, was graduated from the University of Wisconsin and did graduate work at Washington University. Mr. Herzmark, whose father was here for the wedding, received a degree in mechanical engineering from the University of Oklahoma.

Martha Carr's

Today's column is devoted to teen-agers, who are invited to submit their problems to Martha Carr.

Dear Martha:

My girl friend is visiting St. Louis for the summer. About two weeks ago she met a boy and now they are going steady. When she goes home she wants him and me to go steady. She told him and said it wasn't such a bad idea. Do you think this would be right or would it cause talk? I will do almost anything in my power for this friend. JACKIE.

Even keeping her beau in cold storage until she can get back to claim him? Forgive me if I'm way out in left field on this but, according to my old-fashioned ideas, two persons go steady because they like each other and want to be together, not because someone tells them to do so. It seems to me that it's up to the boy. If she is asking you to do this just so he won't date anyone else who might take his mind off her—and because she trusts you not to steal him away from her—then I think she's asking a lot even of a close friend. What will happen when and if she comes back? You give him up and start trying to get yourself back in circulation? No, if you and he want to date each other, that's your business, and the only question of right and wrong, as I see it, would be if they were still going steady and he promised not to date anyone else. Then you would be smart to concentrate on other fellows and leave this romance strictly alone.

Dear Martha:

I AM IN LOVE with a boy I have known for two years and he says he loves me, yet sometimes he doesn't act like it. We are both 18 years old. He doesn't want me to go with any other boys, but he has never asked me to go steady. When he is invited to a party he always asks if I can go, but never asks me to go with him. He always goes stag. He drives a mile every night to pick me up from work and drives me two blocks to my home. All of his friends say he is crazy about me and wonder why I don't go to parties with him, but somehow I can't tell them that he doesn't ask me and I can't ask him why he doesn't. Is he ashamed of me? PUZZLED.

If he didn't like you he certainly wouldn't call for you every afternoon to drive you home, but I don't think he is in love. If he were, he would be insisting that you go with him. But since you have been with him so much, I can't see why you don't just suggest that you go together to a party to which both are invited. Maybe he doesn't realize he's supposed to bring a date.

How about a picnic for the crowd, or a scavenger hunt? Martha Carr's leaflets will help you plan. Be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

What to Wear

By Louise Trescott

OLDER men usually admire large hats. Perhaps they take them back to prewar (first World War, that is) days when Lillian Russell was their goddess. Younger men concede there is dramatic appeal in big beflowered hats. Among questions which have come in on this romantic revival in headwear, the following may be helpful. Sara writes:

LOUISE TRESCOTT

I am too young for such a hat and that picture hats should be worn only with sheaths. Please advise and give me all particulars, including a color that will go with everything. Also tell where these hats are worn and at what time of day. I am 17, 5 feet 7, and weigh 122, so you know I am skinny.

A medium brim is not a true picture hat. If you really want a picture hat it must be wide-brimmed and of fairly pliant construction, although not necessarily floppy. It can be simply trimmed with a flat tailored velvet bow or laden with all sorts of fanciful trimmings. This type of hat is best suited to afternoon clothes and would be worn by a guest at a wedding, luncheon, tea, cocktail party or informal dinner in a public place.

YOUR SLIM height can carry such a hat and it is correct with full or slim silhouettes. It must be worn with assured poise and your ability to do this does not depend entirely on your age. So I can't say whether you are too young or not.

There's another large hat, a kissing cousin to the picture hat, that is very popular this summer and more practical. This is a large hat of stiff straw and is often seen with simple trim but is also attractive heaped with flowers. This skimmer type hat is compatible with suits, coats and dresses and can be worn all day and evening. That hat, too, must be worn with a sophisticated air.

If you decide to buy either type, I suggest getting it in natural straw, as milan or leghorn, and plan several trims. It takes only a moment to tack a tailored bow in place, perch a huge rose on one edge, cover the crown with poppies, or lay a wreath of garden flowers around the brim. Thus you can tie it in mood and color to almost all summer clothes. But remember the softer brim is not so adaptable as the other. And remember with either type of large hat, if flower trimmed, restrain the remainder of your costume. The beauty of the hat is lost if it must compete with a fussy costume or too many colors.

A "VILLAGE HOUSEWIFE" complains: "My husband will give me $50 for new clothes if I will do just one thing—buy a picture hat. I am sure I won't look good because I weigh 142 and am only 5 feet 2. He forgets I am no longer sweet sixteen. He says he has wanted me to wear one ever since we got married and that's for 35 years. How can I convince him that it is not my style?"

I agree he might have a rude awakening should you buy the hat of his dreams. But do not shatter them. Just gently nick them by selecting a brimmed hat as large as your figure will take with grace, and as pretty as possible, trimmed with roses and forget-me-nots, as an example. A Breton type brim would be to your advantage. If well chosen, this suggestion will give the romantic quality your husband seeks and he will be happy. Be sure to wear a simple, well-cut costume with this so that all attention is focused on the handsome hat.

Chicken Dish for Gourmet

By Edith M. Barber

CEAN CITY on the Delmarva peninsula was the scene this year of the ninth annual chicken festival. The most important event for the food editors who gathered there to judge the entries was, of course, the cooking contest. Most of the contestants were women but there were a few men, each of whom prepared a specialty on one of the gas ranges that would the exhibit hall. Cooking was done in two shifts, making it easier for the judges who did not have to do so much tasting at one time. These worked in teams of two, and their selections were tested by the whole group.

Each dish was scored on three counts: appearance, appetite appeal and accuracy of the recipe itself. Naturally, the judges differed to some extent, especially in regard to the first criterion. It would seem, however, possible that any original dishes could be found among the recipes of the contestants. But, as always, there were a few that had a different touch.

Perhaps that was one of the reasons the dish prepared by the third-prize winner appealed to me more than did those which scored slightly higher and which won first and second prizes. The Delmarvelous stuffed broilers, a recipe created by Mrs. Pauline Sullivan, Milford, Del., is indeed a gourmet dish. Delmarvelous Stuffed Broilers.

Two 2½-pound broiling chickens halved, three-fourth cup heavy cream, salt, pepper, white wine, three-fourth cup blanched almonds, grated. Rub chickens well inside and out with half of the heavy cream, and salt and pepper to taste. Put wine in baking dish to about one-fourth-inch depth, and place chickens in dish, skin side down. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees) about one and a quarter hours, basting chickens occasionally. Chop mushrooms and saute lightly. Add rest of cream and grated almonds, and more salt and pepper, if needed. Stir over low heat about five minutes. When chicken is done, fill cavities with mushroom-almond stuffing. Return to slow oven (250 degrees) for about 20 minutes. Sprinkle with paprika before serving.

Chicken Shorcake Eileen. First prize, Mrs. Lillian Weisberg, Hyattstown, Md., one-half cup flour, two teaspoons salt, one teaspoon paprika, two 2½ to 3-pound fryers, cut up cleave thigh and drumstick in one piece, remove bony rib and split breasts down center, three tablespoons shortening, one-fourth cup water, one-half cup concord grape jelly, one-fourth cup dry sherry, shortcake dough.

Sift flour, salt and paprika into paper bag, add pieces of chicken and shake well, then saute in hot shortening until golden brown. Add water, cover and steam until tender, about 15 minutes, until no liquid remains. Remove from skillet and arrange on oven-proof platter. Cover with grape jelly diluted with the wine. Pat out shortcake dough to one-half-inch thickness and place over chicken. Bake in moderately hot oven (425 degrees) 35 to 40 minutes until topping is baked. Turn out on serving platter.

My Day

Comment on Nixon Speech In Pakistan

By Eleanor Roosevelt

HYDE PARK. THE last few days in New York were cool and pleasant and I was particularly glad because I had my two 10-year-old girls taking so many sightseeing trips that I think, had the weather been very hot, they would have been exhausted.

CONCERNING Vice President Nixon's speech in Pakistan, it seems to me strange to practically address his speech to the Prime Minister of India and give it in a country with which India is not on particularly amicable terms at the moment.

Good public relations, I would think, would require such expressions of United States feelings or policy not in a speech but communicated to the individual privately, in his own country or at some other meeting place. This is true, of course, if the speaker intended to bring about friendly feeling and good results.

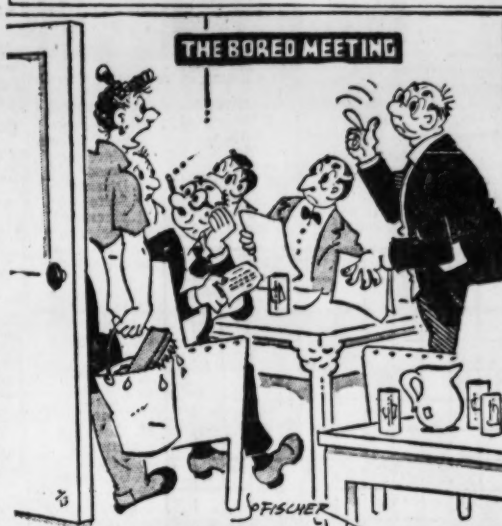

If one intended to be insulting, which I cannot imagine that such a kindly and intelligent person as Vice President Nixon meant to be, then he would pursue the exact methods that he pursued.

AT PRESENT it does not seem possible that we really want to stir up bad feeling with the most important Asiatic country whose Prime Minister is looked to for advice by almost every other country in that area. I was very sorry when the President, because of his health, found it impossible to carry through his meeting with the Prime Minister of India, and it seemed to me unfortunate that whoever attends to public relations in the President's office should have coupled his inability to meet the Prime Minister with his intention to going to a meeting in Panama two weeks later. It would have been better not to mention this trip until the President actually was on his way, for being announced as it was, it looked as if the Panama meeting was considered of greater importance.

The Little Woman No Time for Beauty

By Clarissa Start

"YOU'VE lolled on the beach, swum in the surf, and led a casual carefree life," begins a pretty pink press release which crossed my desk this morning. Almost before I could say, "Who? Me?" this press release, sent out by a manufacturer of beauty aids, continued chidingly, "Now as the summer Clarissa Start, wears off on your looks, it's time to take stock of your beauty."

I can think of almost nothing I would less rather take stock of at this moment than my beauty unless it's my bank account. But ever a slave to the printed word, I was mesmerized until I had finished all five steps recommended for a mid-summer "band box look." I pass them on to you other working slaves, mothers and homemakers, with a few additional notes of my own.

FOR INSTANCE, since most of you have not been lolled on the beach, we amend that to read, "You've steamed over the stove, emptied sand from shoes 9000 times, refereed innumerable backyard fights, and led a horrible hectic life thus far this vacation season."

So first of all, what do you want to do? Take a bath. That's the first step recommended in the summer beauty routine. While you're bathing, that certain brand of cleanser will "float away stale make-up and soil ever so gently from a dry, sensitive skin."

Also, if you're a typical mother and homemaker, a small boy whom you have never seen before will wander into the bathroom and say, "Johnny told me his boats was up here. You got his boats?" Before you step from the bath, "feeling wonderfully spick-and-span," there will have been frantic calls for (a) help, (b) band-aids, (c) food.

But on to step number two, your beauty mask "if you're going out somewhere special." Chances are you're not going out anywhere special. ("Whadya mean, go out?" the father of your children will snarl as he steps in the door. "I been out all day. Lemme get out of these clothes. They haven't air conditioned all the busses, you know.") But try the mask anyway, just for kicks. The kids will laugh themselves silly and you'll feel that, for a change, they aren't really laughing at you but with you.

YOUR THIRD STEP is skin smoothing for which you need the same manufacturer's velvet night lotion because "its dewy protection cushions your skin from drying hot temperatures and squint lines." It disappears instantly but put it on in the bathroom or it might intensify your husband's squint lines.

Your fourth step is make-up, a "veil of powder over your sun-ripened look, brilliance to your lips, and a frosty sheen to your eyelids" with a touch of shadow. We cannot mention trade names in this column but I have another suggestion just learned this summer; that stuff you rub on the kids' chests in winter is awfully good in keeping the chiggers away from your sun over-ripened skin.

Fifth step, "use your dainty aids, brush your hair in a neat style, pin a fresh posy on your dress, spray fragrance on to add the finishing touch" and run like mad to the kitchen. It's time to steam over the stove, referee fights, empty sand from shoes. And reflect on how bored you'd be if you really had time for those five steps to summer beauty.

It's an Idea!

A raffia plant stand may be used to good advantage in the bathroom. Place it near the tub to hold soaps, sponges and other toilet items. Enamel white.

Buffet-Style Shrimp

Ingredients: Two pounds shrimp, one large carrot, one bunch watercress, one cucumber, cocktail sauce or sour cream dip.

Method: Cook, shell and devein shrimp; chill. Pare carrot; cut rounds from wide top end of carrot about one-fourth inch thick; with a small, sharp knife, cut out center of carrot slices to make rings. Wash watercress in cold water; drain well in colander and on paper towels. Pull stem end of one heavy or a few light watercress sprays through each carrot ring; cut off enough of watercress stems to make attractive. Use a large round serving platter if possible; a glass one is pretty. Arrange shrimp in rows like the spokes of a wheel leaving a space in center of plate; alternate shrimp rounds with watercress and carrot rings. Peel, score and slice cucumber; fill center with cucumber slices. Accompany with cocktail sauce or sour cream dip. Makes six to eight servings.

Note: To make sour cream dip, cut small white onions into very thin rounds and separate into rings; marinate in olive oil and vinegar, adding salt, pepper and sugar to taste. Refrigerate overnight in tightly covered

Painting Hint
Paint is fine for most things but keep it off the edges of window sashes, sash cords, rubber extension cords, locks, catches and electrical outlets.

Leftover Roast
Heat that leftover roast pork in a little fat in a skillet with drained canned mushrooms, thin celery crescents and drained canned bean sprouts. Season with a tiny bit of sugar and a little soy sauce. Add a thin brown gravy and serve over cooked rice.

"Little Girl" Blouse
A "wallpaper" printed blouse with blue roses on a white background is used for a "little girl" type of blouse and a matching very full skirt. The blouse has a little high round neckline that unexpectedly dips in a V at the back. Gathered skirt is of the dirndl type.

HERE is another question about astronomy: "Why do stars have special names?"

Many are identified in star catalogues only by numbers, following letters of the alphabet, but some bright stars have names like Altair or Sirius. Many groups of stars were named by the ancient Greeks and Romans. English translations of such names are employed widely today.

One star group, for example, is called Ursa Major. That is a Latin name, but it goes back to a Greek myth. The stars in Ursa Major also go under the name of Big Bear.

The main planets in our solar system have the names of seven ancient gods and goddesses. The goddess Earth and the goddess Venus gave their names to two planets which are almost the same size. All the other main planets were named in honor of gods, ranging from Mercury to Pluto.

One of the small objects known as asteroids is called Ceres, in honor of the Roman goddess of growing plants. A few others also have names, but the majority are without them. If anyone tried to name all the asteroids after Roman or Greek deities, he would run out of names long before he could cover one fourth of these objects.

The bright star Sirius was named by the ancient Greeks. The original meaning of the name seems to have been "scorching." We may figure that the name was applied because Sirius rose in the evening sky, each year, during hot summer weather.

The Arabs played a part in naming some of the stars. Altair, for example, carried an Arabic name which means "the bird."

Play Safe While You Drive!

Keep alert—chew gum

Avoid traffic jitter and driving drowsiness. Chew gum while you're behind the wheel. Chewing helps relieve strain and tension—helps keep you feeling fresh and alert for safer driving. Chew any brand of gum you like but chew while you drive. Naturally, we recommend refreshing, delicious Wrigley's Spearmint Gum—for lively, satisfying flavor and real chewing enjoyment.
